office and asked him if he had any notes to eagerness to see her first-born, sell. Robson said he had one for $377 made by Mrs. Dixon, and arranged that Campbell should again visit the defendant's office on Thursday. Campbell went to Milton as agreed, and Robson produced a cots for $300 purporting to be signed by the Dixons. Campbell went to the bank, drew the $300 and was given the note. He thought that the signature "R. A. Dixon" did not ook like a man's writing and he asked Robson If he saw the note signed. He reolied: "Yes, I saw them sign it in the office " Campbell was still dubious, however, and on the way PERSON'S FATHER IS MY PAVIER, BUT I AM NOT home called on a Mr. McCleilan, who posthe signatures. He thought they differed and, returning to Milton, he saw Robson such told him that if McClellan's note was genuius the other was a forgery. Robson replied genuine, as Mrs. Dixon had given it to him. Campbell still doubted the genuineness of the note, whereupon Robson asked him to wait a few days and he would see Mrs. Dixon and Campbell saw Dixon, however, and he was that of his wife her writing. Robson's arrest followed. When arraigned Robson denied that he and forged the note, and claimed that it had remedies for the removal and cure of all blem- that a warrant be issued for her arrest, but With the arrest of Robson a new phase was given to the case. When Dixon was placed in the witness box he swere that he never signed any notes in conjunction with his wife for money borrowed or otherwise, Send TWENTY-FIVE CENTS for a sample | and that he never gave his consent to his This starement caused a sonsation, for it was known that Mrs. Dixon had negotiated at least half a score of notes purporting to be signed by her husband during the past six or

Mrs. Dixon was called as a witness and admitted that she had been in the habit of borrowing money for several years in sums of $200 and $300 on notes signed by herself and husband. She handled nearly all of them personally. She admitted that a note for $300 in the possession of John Sproat was made by her, and claimed that she signed her husband's name to it by his anthority. He had not given her authority to sign notes for him whenever she liked. She declined, on the ground that it might incriminate her? to say whether Hugh Campbell, Mayor Dica James Henderson, John Jones, Dr. Stuart and Henry Carrique had notes purportingate bear her husband's signature, but which signature was made by her, and also declined for the same reason to say whether there are number of ye re After 25 or 20 actes floating around the county. What Mrs. Dixon, who is 35 years of age, did with the money she berrowed is she dabbled in Mimico real estate seven years ago, and issued the first note at that time. As the notes became due she is sued others to raise funds, to retire the first and by this system of financing kept the knowledge of the existence of the floating paper from her husband. Dixon is a wealthy farmer and his wife had no difficulty in getting the notes cashed. She always gave a plausible reason why she it was the harvest field, or be was engaged elsewhere,

Two daughters have been married recently | yer, has been declared insune. and "we want some ready cash for the wadding" explained the reason for the loan on a couple of occasions. This was but a subterfuge however, as Dixon states he paid all the wording expenses binself. Whether her mistaken action was the outcome of real cetate speculation or not it is certain she had frequent occasion to visit Toronto. It is believed that all the notes have been accounted for and that the total sum which Mr. Dixon will have to pay as the result of his wise's kiteflying experiment will not exceed $3000. Two of the notes, those held by Henderson and Jones, were negotiated through Robson. but Mrs. Dixon swears that she never had a transaction with the accused since, giving as a reason why she failed to go to him again that he failed to hand over all the cash he received as the proceeds of the former notes. Robson will be tried before Judge Kingsmill on Friday. His defence is that he received the Campbell notes from Mrs. Dixon in the same way that he received the other notes; that if there quences. was forgery committed Mrs. Dixon must have committed the forgery. He admits that the money he received from discounting the note he did not pay to Mrs. Dixon, but still retains.

On the other hand, Mrs. Dixon swears that she did not sign the note, that she was not in Robson's office on the day he told Campbell she called, that in fact she had no relations with him whatever for several months. There is another point of evidence to which the prosecution attach considerable importance. Expert evidence will be called to prove that the signatures on the materially from those on the Campbell note discounted by Robson, the formation of the by post prepaid to vaythe & smith, solicitors for | capital latter "D" and the "z" being totalty

The prosecution also advance the theory that Robson, from previous dealings with Mrs. Dixon, gnaw that sue was alguing notes without her busband's knowledge, and that being bard pressed by some of his creditors he floated one on his own account. Theories are not evidence, however, and the prisoner's counsel, Mr. Elliott, is satisfied that the result of the trial will be the acquittal of his Roleson's widowed mother and her family are much respected in the village, and it i hoped that he will be able to emerge with flying colors from the not in the meshes of which he is entangled. Meantime Mr. Dixon will take up all the
