is operated automatically by the weight of the persons escaping from a building to which it is attached, the improvement being designed to supersede the employment of cumbersome and dangerous iron ladders, ropes, cables, etc. The invention forms the subject of a patent in the United States. At a snitable point near the windows in the outside wall of the building. near the ceiling of the upper story, is secured a tube, whose inner end G ECHGE CLIFF, THE GENERAL BEAI is integral with a cast from bracket carrying the regulating mechanism of the carrying the regulating mechanism of the device. The tube forms a bearing for a freely revolving horizontal shaft on whose outer end are two sprocket wheels, at a suitable distance apart to represent the width of a ladder, the notches in the wheels, being spaced to correspond with the distance between two of the rungs of At diest and Electr cal treatment. Calls in the ladder, the guings being attached to city and to stry promptly attended. Hours :- endless wire ropes. On the inner end of the upper shaft is a miter wheel in gear with a pinion, by means of which a governor is operated to controt the speed of revolution of the shaft, as it is rotated by the weight of one or more persons stepping on the ladder. By the operation of the governor a steel brake band is made to bear upon a brake wheel with a pressure corresponding to the weight which may be placed upon the ladder, enabling persons load. The governor may be regulated to cupants of the ladder alight the mechanism ceases revolution, a pawl preventing slack by wear or changes in temperature, the shaft carrying the lower notched sprocket wheels forming the bottom of the ladder has its bearing in a hollow tube, to which are secured eccentrics with enlarged collars adapted to be clamped by lock nuts, whereby the distance between the top and bottom wheels may be regulated. The rungs of the ladder are tubular, and the entire apparatus is incombustible. The wire rope ladder and the sprocket wheels are galvanized, and therefore will not rust. The regulating device being inside of the building and the main shaft bearings in the wall, these parts are entirely protected from the weather. The wire rope forming the sides of the ladder is passed through bornd apertures in the ends of each rung, and firmly fastened by means of a wedge, whereby a very strong ladder is made at a minimum expense, and, being very light, is not in any , way a detriment to the appearance of the building. A basket may be hooked on to the ladder for children, or in other cases when desired and the apparatus may also be used with great advantage as a lowering device for use in warehouses, mills, etc. - Scientific

There is at least one thing, about which doctors agree, and that is the drug which acts, most surely in acute rheumatism. Dr. M. Baudouin has made a tour of the Paris hospitals and finds that all the physicians use salicylate of sods. Some also give bicarbonate of soda and antipyrin, but salicylate is the sheet anchor. The model of administration differs, however. Dujardin-Beaumets gives 15 grains every three hours; Talamon, the same amount every two hours; Strans gives 45 to 60 grains in single oses twice daily; inchehard, To grains of the salicylate and 150 grains of the bicarbonate of soda daily. Barth in some cases gives-quining and antipyrin, while Chauffard uses antipyrin alone, giving 60 to 120 times a day, and Comby 15 grains every two hours. In the New York hospitals larger doses. than the above are often given. In Bellewas, 20 grains every two hours, for the first day, is usually prescribed. In St. Luke's, oil of wintergreen has been much used. Salol has been given also instead of the salicylate. Nothing has yet approached the salicylates in efficacy in the treatment of acute rheumatism. It is generally the septic and genorrhead cases only in which it fails. But there is still a wide divergence of opinion as to how to administer the drug so as to get its effects cito. tuto, et jucunde. - Medical Record.
