Veuve Bazire was an octogenarian living in a small room on the top floor of a high building. Each morning she went to mass, and after her return home spent the remainder of the day in admiring her array of carved crucifixes, marble and alabaster Madonnay, dainty resaries ful endeavors to prevent gambling among and images of saints and angels. She had an income of 700 francs. Her living cost her three france per week. The rest of the mohey it had been ber custom for moley years to spend in the purchase of "objects of devotion One day the widow did not go to mass. The neighbors visited her room, and found her lying on the bed strangled to death The assassip had taken none of the valuable brica brac save a little old clock. A man was seen to enter the apartment the day before the discovery of the murder, He went out after a short stay. Who the assassin is and what was his object are things the detectives are trying to ascertain.

An Elderly Devotee of Copid. Age has little effect on the hopes, aspirations or disappointments of the human heart, and elderly lovers, it seems, are fickle as lads and hawies who stand at the breshold of mature existence. Alexander obnaton, of Pittsburg, Pa., aged 70, finds cromise suit. The plaintiff is Rose Ann. Henderson, who is ten years itia junior She saka $10,000 damages, and abserts that Alex has transferred his affections to a lady who has seen but fifty summers.

Boston, Feb. 18 .- Pete McCoy, the veteran middle weight, showed the white feather in a fight at Ajax club last night in a manner which surprised his admirers. His antagonist was Ed. McGee, a local youngster, and Pete found him a puzzler. McCoy had the best of the fighting for fifteen rounds and had he been armed with anything less than big gloves, which were provided, would updoubtedly have knocked out the young man half a degen times. As it was, however, his blows fell harmless and McGee began to

The referee did not see it, however, and the twentieth round was called. Before it was finished McCoy quit and the fight was
