At the guillotine it was considered a privilege to be allowed to die first, so as to be spared the shock of secing the blued of others. Mme. Roland was granted this favor, but she begged that the man, who was greatly terrified, might go first. The executioner demurred to this, but comdied when she said, with a smile, "Yo cannot, I am sure, refuse the last request f a lady." When her turn came she gazed on the colossal statue of liberty that stood near the guillotine, and exclaimed, "Ah, Liberty' how many crimes are committed in thy name!"
