As famous chronicles do show,

In Britain reigned His court by learned men was thronged; Great soldiers there their stay prolonged,

At Chester once appeared the king. Where Celtic bards his praise did sing

Around him stood the great Welsh lords
Not unsubmissive to his words
Could they remain. And he with pomp and majesty
Sits at the helm:

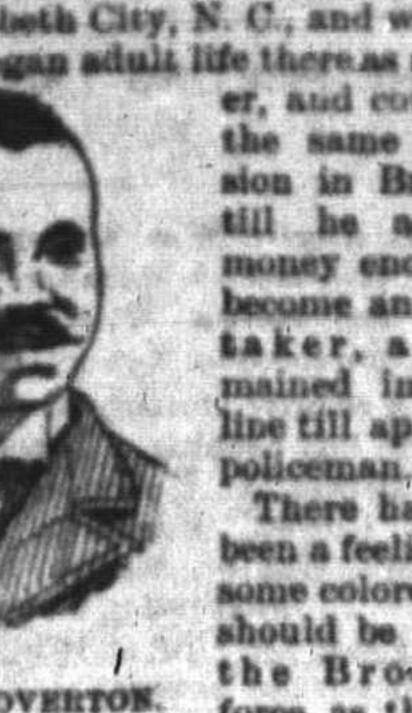

They row while well skilled harpers play, Neither for honor nor for pay— Best in his realm. Soon Kenneth to the princess said : "Why are you in so great a dread Now Edgar was indeed quite small, B'en shorter than his courtiers tall,

More than a span. What Kenneth said full soon was told To Britsin's king, by one more bold Than all the rest; He scarcely seemed to note the slight But saw he must defend his right Ev'n to his best.

So to the woods King Edgar went, And for his adversary sent; Then drew a sword,
Which to King Kenneth straight he gave
To wield it, as a man most brave,
Gainst his liege lord.

Another sword he also drew, Like one who how to use it knew, Then Kenneth saw his great mistake, And soon did reparation make— Edgar and Kenneth from that bour United all their strength and power
