Toronto, recently, belongs to this town and is now ill at the home of her parents in the neighboring township of Mono. She is being attended by Dr. Smith and is at present in a very critical condition. Her companion, who boarded with her at the house, is also in the vicinity. The unfortunate woman, who lies ill at her home, was at one time employed in a private residence in Mill street, and later on at the Gordon House. About seven months ago she removed to Toronto and secured employment in some factory. Before leaving here she kept company with a young man of the East Ward who does not bear the highest reputation and who is believed to have been her seducer. This young man is also at present ill at one of the hotels, but whether his sickness is due to the prevailing is grippe or to remores of conscience over his base treatment of the woman who trusted him, cannot be stated. It is believed the woman made away with the infant in the vain hope of hiding her shame. She is respectably connected.

Canadians as Yankee Soldiers.

Speaking of Canadians, Major Edmond Malet remarked that they made the best soldiers physically that he ever saw. In his company, the 81st New York volunteer infantry, in the late war, he said he had forty five of them, and no hardship could dampen their gay spirits, nor toil exhaust their hardy frames. In those territ'e forced marches of the army of the Poton ac in the Peninsula, with the thermometer far up when thousands of men fall out by the roadside, many of them never to march again, these Canadians trudged along cheerily, beuiling the weary way with joke and song. bey could not understand the wastefulness of their American comrades, who would burl saide overcoate, blankets and other impediments on a hard march, without a thought, so they would carefully gather them up, add them to their own load and bring them into camp, "One evening l remember," said the major, "a Cacadian soldier came into bivouse, after a fearful march from early dawn, with twelve overcoats piled on his knapeack, which he carried all day. He sold them back to their original
