ST. JACOBS OIL TRADE MARK

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN

LUMBAGO—LAME BACK.

Why so many deviate from a graceful carriage may be accounted for in as many ways as there are mis-shapen beings.

ST. JACOBS OIL RESTORES.

Strength.—The spinal column is the mainstay of the body, which stiffens up the straight man or woman, and nature has provided muscular supports to hold it erect.

EFFECTS PROMPT CURES.

Weakness.—Men and women recklessly twist themselves out of shape, and the result is the few standing straight and the many bending down.

CURES ARE PERFECT, PERMANENT.

Symptoms.—Lumbago manifests itself by pains in the back, which are most insidious or subtle. They come at times without warning; we rise from a sitting posture to find the back so crippled or strained as to cause acute suffering.

EVERY APPLICATION RELIEVES.

Treatment.—Rub the parts affected freely with St. Jacobs Oil; rub hard and vigorously, producing warmth, and if the pain is slow in yielding, wrap the parts in flannel steeped in hot water and wrung out.

ONCE CURED, ALWAYS CURED.

The Pert Young Man.

See that half-grown man! He never will know as much again as he does now at the ripe age of 20. When he gets to be 50, when his hair is grizzled and his hopes are like the dead leaves that cling to November trees of rare wisdom and colossal effrontery and blush a little perhaps at the recollection. Now he had no reverence for a woman or for God. He sneers at good in a world whose threshold he has barely crossed, as a year-old child might stand in the doorway of his nursery and denounce what was going on in the drawing-room. Most of the scathing things that are said about his domestic felicity, and the sneers that are bestowed on love, and the gibes that are flung at purity, and the scoffs that are launched at established religions; all the jokes at the expense of noble womanhood and the witticisms that are lavished upon the old-fashioned virtues, spring from the gigantic brain of the youth of the period.—Chicago Herald.

Conclusion of Popular Novel—The Coming Style.

"And you have no regrets, Penelope?"

"None, Reginald!"

"The sorrows and hardships we have suffered, Penelope—have they left no enduring burden of melancholy—no deep and lasting impress on the brave soul that has dared so much, struggled so much, and borne the heavy griefs of so many long, weary years?"

Not a line of sorrow furrowed the fair brow upturned so trustingly, and not the shadow of a heartache dimmed the brightness or mirrored itself in the depths of the soft brown eyes that looked fearlessly but calmly into his.

"No, Reginald," she said. "In the happiness that has come upon us all else is forgotten, and my heart is at rest. The troubles of the past are as if they had never been. Believe me, I look with unfaltering trust to the future, Reginald, and the sun of hope gilds the coming years with a halo whose brightness fills me with measureless joy and content."

The young man took her by the hand and led her to the window.

"See, dearest," he exclaimed, in a voice whose pathos thrilled her whole being. He pointed to an object in the background of the lovely landscape before them on which the mellow rays of the setting sun were still shining. She looked in the direction indicated, and her wondering gaze rested on the high, peaked roof of an old mill, upon which in letters of flaming red was inscribed:

"True happiness is found only in the household where Wigger's Pure Soap is used for all kinds of washing and scrubbing. Price, 25 cents a box. Beware of imitations."

Woman—A Problem.

To the Editor:

It is difficult to understand why so many women suffer in silence from those diseases peculiar to their sex, when they have at their command a remedy guaranteed to put an end to their suffering and restore them to perfect health. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills never fail in cases of functional derangement, irregularities, suppressions, bearing-down pains, weakness, and the many other complaints with which womankind is afflicted. They restore the system, enrich the blood and bring the red and rosy glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. They are equally efficacious from girlhood to old age, and are a boon and a blessing to suffering woman:

Mrs. S. Devine, Petawawa, Ont., writes:—My daughter has been ill for the last two years. She is pale, weak, short of breath with ringing noises in the head, cold hands and feet, and not RIGHT. Doctoring all the time and of no benefit. The doctor says her blood has turned to water, and that she is run down very low. After taking four boxes Pink Pills she again writes:—I enclose balance due on Pills. I am well satisfied with them, and I must say that I have got every satisfaction that any person could ask. I can recommend your Pink Pills to anyone that is out of health. The change in my daughter's health and appearance is so wonderful that a great many persons are continually asking me for some of the medicine that cured her, so I wish to take an agency for the sale of your pills in this place.

Mrs. M—— M——, Brockville, Ont., says:—Gentlemen,—My daughter, S——, was sick for about a year, crying all the time with the pains of her head and eyes. In the morning her eyes and face were all swelled. She was pale and short of breath, with great jumping of her heart whenever she tried to do anything or walk. Appetite bad or else entirely gone, with a dirty tongue and a bad stomach. She was never properly regular. She took two boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they cured her. She became regular, within a month, and she remained so since, and is in the best of health. I can heartily recommend these Pills to all sufferers who are in the miserable condition my daughter was.

These Pills are for sale by all dealers, or will be sent post paid, in sealed package, on receipt of price (50 cents a box), by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medical Co., Brockville, Ont.

Not on to Their Curves.

"So, you have been playing poker, eh! Did you play with straights?"

"No; with crooks."

Nautical, Yet True.

"In making a will, Mr. Higgins, what is the first thing to do?"

"Look out for breakers."

What It Was to Her.

Maud—Why do you call that ring a war relic?

Ethel—I won it in my first engagement.

Full of Alarm.

Frank—Blanche seems awfully shy. What do you suppose makes her so timid?

May—She's probably afraid your not going to propose.

When Noah Was the Odd Man Out.

"He can trace his ancestry back to the flood."

"Oh, pshaw. That's nothing. Everybody was in the swim then."

Never Asked to "Look Pleasant."

Spiggit—The Chinese do not permit their women to be photographed.

Givvit—No; they have quite an artistic sense. I have seen some Chinese women.

Certain.

"Do you believe Bronson married for love? You know she is just made of money."

"If that is true, I've no doubt he married her for love."

Heredity.

"It is curious that so attractive a man as Browney never married."

"Family influence. All his ancestors for four generations back were bachelors I believe."

Satisfied.

Johnny (sobbing)—Does it re-really h-hurt you to wh-whip me, mamma?

Ma—Yes, my son; very much more than it hurts you.

Johnny (drying his eyes)—I'm so glad!

The Source of Supply.

Teacher—Where do we obtain coal, Freddy?

Freddy—From the coal-beds, ma'am.

Teacher—Right! Now, Jimmy, where do we obtain feathers?

Jimmy—From the feather beds, ma'am.

The Domestic Problem.

"Going to leave?"

"Yes. Before I came you told me that your other cook had got married before she'd been with you a month. I've been here now two years and don't even know a single policeman on the beat."

A Difficulty Overcome.

Tommy—Papa, they say Jordan is a hard road to travel, don't they.

Papa—Yes.

"Jordan is a river, ain't it?"

"Yes."

"Then why don't they swim it."—Texas Siftings.

Judging by Signs.

"And above all things," said the mother to the young bride, "be particular to ask your husband if he's contented with the chambermaid. If he says 'yes,' dismiss her at once."

"But if he says 'no'?"

"That's a worse sign yet. In that case make sure to discharge her."

Ne Plus Ultra.

Tom—Speaking of musical prodigies reminds me I knew a man who could play one of Wagner's operas on a penny whistle.

Dick—Why, my old professor could play a Christmas carol on a cornucopia.

Harry—That's nothing. I myself have played a prank on a greenhorn.

Too Transparent.

A recruit was brought up for medical inspection, and the doctor asked him:

"Have you any defects?"

"Yes, sir; I am near-sighted."

"How do you prove it?"

"Easily enough, doctor. Do you see that nail up yonder on the wall?"

"Yes."

"Well, I don't."

A Pleasant Herb Drink—A Spring Medicine.

The druggists tell us that people call daily for the new cure for constipation and sick-headache discovered by Dr. Silas Lane. It is said to be Oregon grape root (a great remedy in the far west for those complaints) combined with simple herbs, and is made for use by pouring on boiling water to draw out the strength. It sells at 50c and $1 a package and is called Lane's Family Medicine.

A MOVING SOLILOQUY.

IT BRINGS TO THE MIND'S EYE A FAMILIAR SCENE.

Many a Peaceful Home Torn Up By the Change of the Season—Why Some People Move and When Some Others Should Remain.

To move, or not to move;
that is the question;
Whether 'tis better another year to suffer
The stingy meanness of our grasping landlord,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles
And by moving end them! To pack; to move
Once more, and by our moving say we end
The sewer gas and thousand vile annoyances
This place is heir to—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To pack, to move;
To move, to a worse place perchance; ay, there's the rub;
For in that move what woes may come
When we have left this dear old flat,
Must give us pause; there is the fear
That makes calamity of so long lease;
For who would bear the sights and sounds and smells,
The dirty halls, the janitor's contumely,
The wild tin-pan piano just next door,
The neighbor's children shrieking night and day,
The trombone player in the room above,
And all the temper trying nuisances,
When he might pack his goods and skip
With a strong drayman. Who would ever live
In this run-down, dilapidated flat,
But that the dread of something even worse,
The undiscovered woes we're sure to find
After a lease is signed, puzzles us still
And makes us rather keep the flat we have
Than fly to landlords that we know not of!
Thus experience does make cowards of us all,
And thus the mad, rash vows of other times
Are sicklied o'er when moving day arrives,
And then the perfect home we swore we'd rent
We quite forgot and in the same old flat
Remain another year.

—Chicago Herald.

"Wife," says Mr. Larkspur, who is a teacher of the classics in a big seminary, "do you know where my Julius Cæsar can be found?"

"He can't be found," answers the wife through a mouthful of carpet-tacks, "but you will find Marcus Aurelius in the coal hod, for I put him there myself."

"Woman," retorts Mr. Larkspur distractedly, "where are my household gods, my lares et penates?"

"The liars are right here," answers Mrs. Larkspur cheerfully, "but the children ate all the peanuts, poor things; they are nearly starved, but we'll be settled in a month or two now."

"A month or two. Cæsar Augustus, it's enough to make Rome howl to hear you."

"Let it howl, Mr. Larkspur, I'd just as lief. But you know even Rome wasn't built in a day."

"Is that an earthquake?" inquired her husband as a crash was heard that shook the house.

"No. That's only the girl falling down stairs. She has stepped on a bar of soap and likely as not spoiled it, but I expect she would leave if I said anything about it. Now, Mr. Larkspur, will you, or will you not, carry that cooking stove in and set it up?"

"I'd rather set it up for the boys," groaned Mr. Larkspur, but as his wife was not up in the classics, she didn't catch on that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Larkspur are representative of half the families in this city at this season of the year, when the head of the household is in receipt of numerous telegrams calling him away on important business which demands his immediate attention. He knows well that if he stays at home, he will be required to ride over to the other house on a load of furniture; to carry the parlor lamp mother sent at Christmas; to hold the mantel mirror in the van. He has his choice between doing that and nailing down the carpet. His wife, rolled up to resemble an Egyptian mummy, stands on the sidewalk and gives orders, and insists on the things going into the van head-first, and not at all in the way that Mrs. Noah would have advised. But no matter with what care and system the moving feat is accomplished, there is always a Tower of Babel confusion before everything is located in the new house. If left to themselves the furniture family would never have moved at all.

There is a legend concerning a plant that shrieks when torn from its native soil. Every chair and table and chest of drawers and stove pipe shriek and groan in a crescendo of lamentation when torn from the place they had fitted into. All the pictures leave their photographs on the wall and the family reckoning is lead-pencilled on the folding-doors and the window casements.

Mabel. Born June 10, 1889. Hurrah! Tom. Thirty-six inches tall July 4. There is the mark of Jim's shaven head on the wall by the side board. Ah, well! nobody saw mother kiss that spot when she left the old house, but she did, for Jim moved last year a long way off into an unknown country.

"Miouw! Miouw!"

There isn't a more desolate or homeless thing on the face of the earth than a cat whose folks have just moved. Naturally she thinks from the confusion that the end of all things is at hand. She walks over the mirrors and pictures that have always had sacred associations for her as being beyond her reach, and sees a distorted image of herself, bristling for a fight. Then she discovers the cheat, and retires precipitately into a barrel filled with crockery. When she is at last at the new house she refuses to be comforted. Dogs attach themselves to persons, but cats love places. She is another misfit in a family of misfits, but after many days the house and the people, domestic and pets, begin to draw together, and that magnetic power known as the intellect of love makes a home out of what is only an ordinary house and everybody begins over again from the baby to the cat.

Why do people move?

The reasons are as varied as the movers. Ask a man submerged in a wreckage of moving and he will mumble, "because I was a fool." In many cases it is a choice between moving and house-cleaning, choosing the least of two evils. Sometimes it is easier to move than to pay rent, and it is the landlord then who beats the air. In these days of hygienic improvements people are careful to look after sewerage and localities to shun the blue flag of diptheria and the red flag of scarlet fever. Moving should mean a better street, a more refined neighborhood, a good school, and a healthy home site. If it does not include all three, take a homeopathic dose of good advice, "Don't."—Detroit Free Press.

Moving Time.

Are you preparing to move? Do you want a new carpet? If you do go to the Standard Carpet House of R. McFaul, the largest variety of patterns, the best qualities, at the lowest prices, to choose from; curtain poles, complete, with brass trimmings for 25 cents; art blinds, with roller pull, etc., for 50 cents; 300 pairs of lace curtains, of which we have only one or two pairs of each pattern, at little more than half price; portieres and curtain material of every description at extremely low prices. Remember and try the Standard Carpet House of R. McFaul for your house furnishings.

One Dozen Bottles.

Of the best known Blood Remedy will not work such a change in a case of Catarrh as one package of Clark's Catarrh Cure. All the wise talk about Catarrh being a constitutional of blood disease depends entirely upon what the advertiser has to sell. If you have Catarrh in any form, try Clark's Catarrh Cure, and you need not take a cart-load of it before any benefit is derived. Druggists keep it and recommend it. Price 50 cents. Sent to any address by Clark's Chemical Co., Toronto, New York.

Just as Good.

Perhaps; but if just as good as Putnam's, is that not a very high recommendation for the original and best corn cure? Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Refuse to accept any of the dangerous sore producing substitutes offered by greedy dealers who make larger profit and disregard the interests of consumers. Safe, painless, certain.

HONORS TO AN HISTORIAN.

The Literary World of America Congratulates Dr. Ridpath on His Birthday.

Dr. John Clark Ridpath, the historian, was recently tendered a reception at Greencastle, Ind., in recognition of his extraordinary talents and in honor of his fifty-first birthday. The exercises took place in Meharry hall, and comprised a delightful musical and literary programme. President J. P. D. John, of De Pauw university, delivered the introductory address, and Tucker Woodson Taylor, Dr. James Newton Matthews, Alonzo Hilton Davis, James Whitcomb Riley, and Mary Hartwell Catherwood were among those who contributed to the entertainment. An autograph souvenir containing sentiments and expressions of good will from 200 authors of the United States was presented to Dr. Ridpath. The letters were bound in two volumes, and comprise one of the most unique and interesting collections in the United States.

Dr. Ridpath, who was born in Putnam county, Ind., obtained his education frontier schools. At nineteen he entered Asbury (now the De Pauw) university, where he graduated with the highest honors in his class. He was soon afterward made principal of the academy at Thorntown, Ind. He held this position three years, and was then chosen to fill the chair of languages at Baker university, Baldwin City, Kan. In 1869 he was elected professor of English literature in Asbury university, and in 1879 became vice president. He received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Syracuse, N. Y., in 1880.

Among the most important of Dr. Ridpath's published works are "Academic History of the United States," "Popular History of the United States," "Inductive Grammar of the English Language" and "A Cyclopædia of Universal History."

The Interesting History of the Trap-Door Spider.

Here is an excellent picture of this curious insect and its still more remarkable habitation. This spider is sometimes termed the "underground weaver," but its more common name is the "Trap-door Spider. In entomology it is classed under the head of the Tetrapneumones, and is described as having four lung-sacs, four stigmata, and two pairs of spinnerets. This repulsive-looking creature is a veritable Argus, having eight acute, brilliant ocelli, which are immovable and lidless, as are the eyes of all other insects. The entire body and spreading legs are covered with dusky, irregular hairs that, in addition to inky horns and sharp, serrated nippers, give him a formidable aspect. A little below the claw-like pinchers is a small aperture through which the venom is emitted that is comparatively harmless to man, but capable of producing instant death to its prey. Indeed nature seems to have formed this insect for a life of hostility. It burrows in the earth for several inches, rounding and polishing off the sides of the cylindrical hole before weaving about the walls a gray, lacelike lining of exquisite texture and softness. The door is made of earth, lined with the same silken fabric. It is joined to the main structure after the manner of actual hinges. To insure a perfect fit, the sagacious little architect then bores two infinitesimal openings in the trap-door, in which he inserts his tiny horns and pulls it "tight-shut." The entire "nest" can be taken out from the earth and preserved for an indefinite length of time, owing to the surprising strength and tenacity of the web. The Trap-door spider frequents warm climates, and can generally be found wherever one has the misfortune to run across his first cousin, the tarantula, which he greatly resembles. Unlike the latter, however, his bite is not dangerous. His favorite pastime is to wage fierce battle with his sworn adversary, the wasp, though in most cases he is badly worsted in the conflict.
