Lady Macdonald's home is peculiarly well situated on a point jutting out into the Ot tawa river, where it commands enchanting views of the parliament buildings crowning their tree-clad eminence; of the valley of the Ottawa, extending castward and westward, with the Grand river speeding swiftly through its centre, and of the Laurentia mountains, lifting their smooth shoulder to close in the horizon. All this may be seen from the windows of her boudoir, a level brighe room, furnished with deek, book shelves, tables, easy chairs, sofs, pictures and other pleasant accessories, where much hard work is done by its occupant. "Earnsoliffe," if not precisely an imposing salfice, is, at all events, an exceedingly omfortable one, and is competently if not axuriously furnished. The everyday life of he household is somewhat after the French ashion; a oup of chocolate before rising, breakfast at 11 and dinner at 7, this arrangement being found most convenient for the premier. The guest chambers are rarely unoccupied, Lady Macdonald delighting in a cheery home, the hum of happy voices. She has only one child, a daughter, whose precarious state of health has unhappily pre-

the Conclusion of the Business Yesterday On Friday afternoon at the teachers' con rention Mr. Sinclair talked of "Definit Means to Definite Ends in Busy Work. This is simply a means of securing the true education of the child through his self activities as all education is selfeducation. He dwelt chiefly "Expression" in the three moulding, drawing and writing, and showed how these should be simply a continuation of the kindergarten lesson. In addition to these numbers, balance or symmetry and color may all be taught by the use of simple objects. Prang's drawing models were shown and highly commended. In the absence of Mr. Harvey, who was o describe the schools of New Zeafand, Dr. Spankie gave a short address on some matters of general interest to the teachers, and after a brief recess Mr. Sinclair was called upon again. Mr. Sinclair began his address on "Child endy" by telling a story of a lady who, meeting Dr. Vincent when he was a young man, expressed surprise that he was a teacher saying: "Why, I don't see how anyone can be a teacher. I dielike old people, I can't tol-erate young persons and fairly hate child-ren, but I fairly dote on pups." This young ady represents the one kind of which teach ers cannot be made.
