ARRESTED FOR MURDER

MRS. CARROTHERS, OF RAINY RIVER FOR KILLING HER HUSBAND.

The Mystery Cleared Up by Government Detective Murray-History of the Mys terious Crime-The Wife Charged With Putting an End to Her Husband-Ar

TORONTO, Aug. 14.-Government Detec tive Murray has just unravelled one of the most intricate cases of crime that has ever been before the department.

Five years ago a farmer in Brad ord town ship, Perth county, went to the Northwest on a prospecting tour, and located in the Rainy River district near Port Fraser, where he constructed a saw mill. He returned to Perth and engaged a young man named Thomas Blake Carrothers to go to the Northwest and conduct the business for him. Carrothers had a short time previously been married to Nettie Stack. In the spring of 1890Carrothers removed to the Ramy River district with his wife and built a log house and to all appearances the couple were living happily together. In the fall of 1890 rumors began to circulate that Fotheringham, who accompanied the Carrothers to the North west, was too intimate with Mrs. Carrothers. These rumors naturally reached the ears of Carrothers and he charged his wife with being unfaithful to her mar riage bonds. She denied the accusation and the affair blew over until on Dec. 14, 1890, Carrothers came home unexpectedly and found Fotheringham in the house. A plausible excuse for his presence was accepted and things resumed the even tenor of their way until a night after, when Carrothers again returning home unexpectedly found Fotheringham and Mrs. Carrothers scuffling. Then a large sized row occurred and Fotheringham was notified that if he did not leave the house forthwith he would be killed. Fotheringham took Carrother's advice and departed for Rat Portage and did not return for several weeks.

On Jan. 3 the dead body of Carrothers was found in the house. There were two bullets in his head and a 38-calibre revolver with two chambers discharged was found beside him. Mrs. Carrothers claimed that she went to the river, 120 feet away, to wash some articles, and on her return found her husband lying dead on the floor An inquest was held and a verdict of suicide

Those acquainted with the liason between Mrs. Carrothers and Fotheringham were not at all satisfied with the verdict, and the facts were laid before the Atterney General's Department, with the result that Detective Murray was despatched to the Rainy River district to investigate the cir cumstances. That officer learned sufficient to justify him in concluding that Carrothers met his death at the hands of an assassin and that his wife was cognizant of all the circumstances connected therewith. The detective ascertained that Mrs. Car rothers had on several occasions endeavored to induce neighbors to purchase poison for her. As long ago as September, 1890, the woman asked a man named Farthing nish the strychnine, but gave the man "rough on rats," which he delivered to Mrs. Carrothers. Still later another neighbor, Mr. Jordan, was induced to purchase corrosive sublimate, the name the poison being written on slip of paper by Mrs. Carrothers, Jordan, who is a German, being unable to prenounce

THE ALLEGED MURDERESS

After the shooting a neighbor named Fisher, whose officious interest in the case was one of the features of the investigation, notified Dr. Phair. The latter made a careful examination of the wounds and despite the verdict of suicide rendered by the fury was satisfied that deceased could not have shot himself. One of the bullets entered the head two inches above and below the right ear, while the other entered near the left eye and taking a downward direction lodged under spinal column.

The case against Mr. Jennings was post-poned till to-day; Edward Handcock was committed for trial on the charge of mardering his daughter Sophie. The confinement has worked no appreciable change in the aspect or demeanor of the prisoner. He came up the stairs leading to the dock with a broad smile and without the least appearance of anxiety. Shortly before his case was called, counsel, Mr. Murdoch, asked permission to have his ears examined by the doctors present, W. H. B. Aikine and Luke Teskey. To this the Crown Attorney objected; but the magistrate ruled it in order and straightway the prisoner retired for a few minutes to the detectives' room for examination. The case was then called. The first question asked by the Magistrate was, "Have you any further evidence to effer, Mr. Badgerow?"

The prisoner was then committed for trial on the charge of murder. A number of Mr. Handcock's friends thereupon came forward and shook the prisoner warmly by the hand. When he retired to the cell he was allowed a short conference with his wife in the presence of Detective John Cuddy. THE MITCHELL TRAGEDY

Wording of the Verdict-the Prisoner Goes to Stratford Gaol.

MITCHELL, Aug. 14. - When the jury in the Whale murder case brought in their verdict at 2.35 vesterday morning there was still a large audience on hand to hear the last of this affair of keen local interest. The ladies, who had been present throughout the inquiry in large numbers, had gradually dropped out after midnight, and at 1.30 only five or six remained. Before the ver dict was given out the prisoner Whale was brought upstairs, and he heard the decision with apparent coolness. It was worded as

We, the jury empannelled to inquire into the death of Ann Whale, are unanimously of opinion that Daniel Whale, on the 11th of August, 1891, in the Town of Mitchell, County of Perth, did feloniously and unlaw ully kill and slay the said Ann Whale against the peace of our lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

Counsel for the prisoner was evidertly satisfied with the finding and content that should not be a direct finding of murder. The omission from the document signed by the jurors of the words dof malice aforethought" was to some extent a fortunate thing for Whale. He was taken back to the cell and was to-day conveyed to the Stratford Gaol to await the October Assizes, when his trial will take place.

Mrs. Whale's body was taken to Toronte o day to be buried in the Necropolia Cemetery. Whale was allowed to attend the funeral in Mitchell this morning. He displayed no emotion whatever, but preserved the same indifferent attitude.

Skepticism is simply not believing. It is denial, negation, darkness. There is only one cure for darkness, and that is coming the light. If you will persist in putting your eyes out, or in harring God's daylight out, there is no help for you, you must die in the dark. Sin has made your soul sick, and if you will not even try Christ's medicine, then the bloodpoisoning of infidelity will run its fatal course.
