AN OFFICIAL TOUGH.

Mr. Senecal, who has found it convenient to resign his place as superintendent of the printing bureau, is an official tough. It cannot be said of him that he was an old-timer, that he had large drafts upon his income, that he felt the pinchings of poverty, and, reluctantly, accepted of little gifts from business friends, and that these did not in the latter of the second day of the exhibition.

Out in stocks, consider a great deal of damage done. F. and J. Herron are putting rolls into their flour mills to a capacity of forty barrels. The newest sort to be introduced into this country is the American Bronze. Only a few small plots are now grown in Ontario. The straw is long, grain large, and of a rich bronze shade, the color being very distinct when grown on light soils. It is early, very productive, and especially free from rust even in unfavorable experimental stage; it does extremely well in all sections of Ontario, is almost as hardy as rye. The straw is very stiff and bright, the head long and square, free from rust, ripens early, and is very productive, tillering freely. On good soil it should not be sown thicker than one and a quarter bushels per acre. Taking the eastern part of the province it is the best fall wheat now in cultivation, and calculating the area of this wheat harvested it will decidedly yield several bushels per acre more than any other sort now grown in Ontario. It is each year improving in quality and yield. Next will come the Early Red Clawson, then the Golden Cross, Surprise and Manchester. Up to 1881 the sheep-masters did not know what on earth to do with their mutton but the discovery was then made that if could be sent in a frozen state to Britain. Great was the alarm among the classes, from dukes to butchers, who controlled the British meat market. Strong prejudices were stirred up against frozen meat, and as at first some of the mutton was discolored, there was ground for prejudice. But the New-Zealanders got hold of the scientific truth that intense cold can be produced in a chamber with walls impervious to heat through the simple process of compressing air by steam power, and then letting it into the chamber, where it expands to its natural bulk. They gradually perfected their ma-chinery and plant, established freezing-works near the ports of shipment, and sent the frozen caroasses, nicely encased in elean bags, to the freezing chamber of the steamer. There they keep hard as marble and per-fectly sweet for months, and, for aught I know to the contrary, could be kept for years. I sailed from Plymouth in the years. I sailed from Plymouth in the Aorangi, and from Cape Town in the Ionic, both of them magnificent steamers, belonging to different lines, and on board both the mutton brought to the table had made the voyage round the Horn, and then been in the Thames for weeks, yet better mutton I never ate. Reeping a Steady Temperature. have thermometers in different parts of the machine, and note the remarkable variations in temperature and lines of currents of air. In a warm room, in cold weather, the slight est crack in the wall, or pin hole that lets in cold air, is sure to create a current that alters the temperature all along the banks of this current. Ordinarily we do not notice these things, but if you have several hundred eggs under your charge, and you know that a variation of four or five degrees of temperature will destory them, you necessarily become a close student of tem-

Now the dairyman is not in so close a hole as is the man who runs an incubator, but at the same time he is dependent to a very large extent for success upon the care with which he looks after the temperature he has to deal with. In the cheese vat he will find several different temperatures in different parts of the vat. So it is with the cream vat or shurn. Not only ido these different parts vary, but no one of them retains a given temperature for any length of time. All sorts of outside influences are constantly at work changing each part of the vat to a hotter or colder condition. For this reason, when you are getting a vat of milk or cream to a certain temperature, and you find you have reached the correct degree, it will not do to take out the thermometer and go about some other work. The chances are a hundred to one other work. The chances are a hundred to one that the milk will not stop where you want it to, but it will go on getting higher or lower, and you must reverse the action to bring it back again. Eternal vigilance is the price of a steady temperature.

There is nothing of equal importance with temperature in the dairy, whether it be in the stable, in the milk room, in the factory, or in the utensils, everything should be done. or in the utensils, everything abould be done at stated degrees of heat or cold, and for this reason the man in charge should be a
