Good Advice.

This is emphatically the fur cape season and ladies should use great care in selecting their goods. Don't buy the first place you go to. Look around and see who are giving the best value. It is said that the fur capes sold at the Boston Fur Store are larger and have deeper collars than can be had anywhere else.

SCIENCE HALL OPENED

DR. GHANT'S STORY OF THE BUILDING AND EQUIPMENT.

The Late John Carruthers a Friend as True as Steel—The Contributions From Various Sources—A Cheque to Have Sir John's Name Made Memorable.

The dedication of the John Carruthers science hall occurred this afternoon in the presence of many persons. Rev. Dr. Williamson delivered the dedicatory prayer, the students sang "God Save the Queen," and then Principal Grant spoke, first giving the persons to whom the college authorities were indebted for the science hall and its equipment. He said: "In discussing the matter with the friend whose name will be forever associated with this hall, I pointed out that little could be done unless, to begin with, we had two or three new buildings, and that for the necessities of the medical as well as the strictly science course, the accommodation for chemistry and its applications to industry and life, would have to be greatly extended. On giving an estimate that $10,000 would provide what was most urgently needed in this respect he at once agreed to subscribe that amount. This is a fitting occasion to pay a tribute to the memory of John Carruthers. He, in the city hall, as the representative man of Kingston, welcomed me at my inauguration as principal, and from that night to the day of his death I found him a friend, true as steel, and always ready to bear his share of my proposed burdens, as well as to give sound and prompt advice at critical times. He was a bit of as genuine human stuff as I have found in this province; unbending where principle was concerned, as the granite of his native country; impatient, intolerant even of anything unbusiness-like in business, but with a heart under the granite as sensitive and tender as a child's, and with a faith that never failed in humanity and in what could be done for its highest welfare by right education. I miss him more than I can well express, but we all rejoice that this hall will keep his name and memory green to the latest generation."

The college cost $18,000 and the debt remaining it is expected will be rapidly reduced. As to equipment "by a timely legacy from Mrs. Atcheson, widow of the late Dr. Atcheson, of Smith's Falls, we were enabled to furnish the quantitative and qualitative laboratories in the very best style. The third laboratory for water and gas analyses and more advanced medical investigations, and the fourth for work in mineralogy are still waiting for benefactors. A thousand dollars would be well spent in this way next summer." The locomotive works gave a gas engine worth $500, and J. H. Birkett gave $25 to place it in the basement. The Edison electric company, Peterboro, contributed a dynamo, a fifty-five lamp machine of sixteen candle power. Other contributions were: A boiler from the directors of the Kingston foundry, to supply distilled water, steam for steam baths and other purposes; also a library table for small classes on the seminary plan, presented by J. Reid; an exhaust tank to supply reduced pressure for filtering operations by Elliott Bros.; belting to connect the gas engine with the fan, by Ford Bros.; inscriptions over the quantitative and qualitative laboratories by T. McMahon; induction coils by W. J. Mahood, and $50 from Dr. Williamson, who seems to have the purse of Fortunatus whenever science calls, to purchase electrolysis apparatus, such as constant batteries, resistances, platinum dishes, etc. D. Fraser and R. Waldron contributed $100 towards the general expense of furnishing the hall.

"Permit me now to state what is required to complete the chemistry and mineralogy departments on their present basis, in addition to providing for the debt on the building and the equipment of the two laboratories already referred to: (1) various appliances in the shape of electrical plant, balances, air baths, spectroscope and assay apparatus, amounting to $1,500. The cost of each can be given by Dr. Goodwin to any person who wishes to present it to the university. (2) Endowment for the lectureship in mineralogy, to which Mr. Nicol has been appointed—$20,000. Hugh Waddell, of South Monaghan, has promised $2,500 towards this, on condition that three others offer the same before convocation in April next. (3) A fellowship in chemistry and mineralogy.

"I hope that before those who are preparing in this hall are sufficiently educated to enter a school of electrical or mining engineering, metallurgy and assaying, the provincial government shall have established in Kingston that school of practical science, for which eastern Ontario has already waited too long. Those who prepare in a university for such a school will not have to work in shop or mine by the rule of thumb, but will widen the bounds of science and discover new applications of practical utility. In anticipation of this, the attention of the senate is to be called to the question of establishing degrees in civil, mechanical, electrical and mining engineering.

"Before concluding let me read a letter which I received, the other day, from the Hon. Senator Gowan, LL.D., a benefactor who on previous occasions has anticipated our wants and made suggestions that we have gladly acted upon. He writes: 'I beg to enclose you a check for $500 which I should like to be the nucleus of a fund to establish a scholarship, or otherwise aid in respect to some branch of higher education in the university, and to be identified with the name of Sir John Macdonald. I am not without hope that when it is known that such a fund has been commenced, old friends of Sir John may be disposed to add to it now, and from time to time.' Such a letter requires no comment. Considering how closely Sir John was identified with the establishment of Queen's more than fifty years ago and his continued interest from first to last, it is most fitting that his name should be associated with it in some way that would be useful to the country. The form of the endowment will, of course, depend on the response that Senator Gowan's letter may elict. It may be a scholarship, a resident teaching or travelling fellowship, a laboratory or a chair, but in any case no appeal will be made and nothing done that would interfere with the canvass for the national memorial. Senator Gowan has himself contributed by a sum sufficient to found a prize, but I shall be much surprised if others do not volunteer to share in the larger work suggested by him. I shall report progress at the convocation held in the first week of November."

Police Court—Friday.

Alexander McLean, a typical knight of the road, stood up to answer the charge of drunkenness and abusive language. Mr. Stearns testified that McLean came in his yard last night, and when asked to leave used very abusive language, and said he wanted an overcoat. As he persisted in remaining Mr. Stearns telephoned for the police. The prisoner acknowledged he had become "tipsy" and pleaded acquittment as he expected a job at the locomotive works. The magistrate fined him $10 and $2 costs, or three months in jail, and one hour to leave the city if he did not obtain work.

A Fine Play.

The Josie Mills dramatic company played the great society drama, "The Governess," to a fair audience in the opera house last night. The production is a new one, written by E. J. Schwarz, and, although having been put on the stage only three weeks, it has already scored a brilliant success. The stage settings are extremely fine and worthy of especial mention. All acted their respective parts admirably, and to particularize we might mention the names of J. F. Ainsley, as "Jarvis Coulter"; E. J. Sullivan, as "Jimmy Needles," and George Sheldon, as "Joe Moncton," a typical tramp, or "one of the profession," as he styled it. Miss Mills, in the role of "Zorah Warden," governess, acted with feeling and candour. To-night the company will produce the laughable comedy, "A Brave Girl."

DOWN AT WASHINGTON.

He Was Delighted With the City and the Great Council.

Rev. Mr. Kines returned home from Washington, D.C., yesterday, charmed with his visit to the beautiful city and to the great Methodist ecumenical council. He was at the capitol for about eight days. He says he was pleased with the Canadian delegation. The members of it won golden opinions. Rev. Dr. Carman was far and above the most able executive officer that presided. Rev. Dr. Douglas was eloquent and commanded great attention. Whenever he was on the floor the greatest order prevailed. Revs. Dr. Stephenson, Hugh Price Hughes, Dr. Arthur and Dr. Douglas were the lions of the council. Rev. Dr. Briggs, in his review of Methodism in Canada, gave an admirable address, and Dr. Dewart was very entertaining in his essay on the religious press. There was a very large number of visitors from Canada—three for every delegate sent.

Mr. Kines was strongly impressed with the lack of unity among the various denominations in England. There was no display of fellowship, rather an evidence of acerbity. And the Britishers were quite arrogant; they wanted to monopolize everything. Three of them spoke for every one from the other countries, and some of them were peculiarly waspy in their remarks. The sermon of Bishop Newman on "John Wesley" was a wonderful effort. Dr. Newman may visit Canada during the winter.

Mr. Kines intended going to hear Bishop Newman speak on "John Wesley," but being asked to preside at a church that had a debt on it of $35,000 he deprived himself of the pleasure. The entire debt of the church was wiped off by the collection taken on the morning that he preached.

The speeches of the many famous preachers were limited to half an hour and the oratorical treats were beyond description.

Mr. Kines tells of a colored divine who got up in the council and literally held the audience spell-bound. It was the grandest effort he had ever listened to and the house was simply thrilled and taken by storm by his incisive and sound logic. Whenever a listener disagreed with the speaker they would call out no, no. The different churches in the city, where the strangers officiated, were packed at every service.

Mr. Kines visited many of the institutions of Washington, talked with many of the governmental officials, was entertained most hospitably and in his intercourse with the council delegates was received in a brotherly spirit. He attended a reception at the "White House." According to arrangement president Harrison and Mrs. Harrison received the delegates in the blue room and cordially shook hands with each of the delegates as they were presented by Bishop Hurst. An amusing feature of the introduction was the fact was that Lieut. Parker when announcing the name of the person would invariably prefix the title of doctor, so that merchants and lawyers, editors or humbler individuals were all "doctors" before reaching the president.

THE NEW BISHOP.

A Great Hearted Broad Churchman is the Bishop of Massachusetts.

PHILLIPS BROOKS.

The great hearted broad churchman, Phillips Brooks, the ornament and pride of Boston, is now bishop of Massachusetts. As head of the diocese his influence will certainly enlarge still further the interests of the Protestant Episcopal church. Phillips Brooks is a man beloved, and the opposition manifested by certain high churchmen to his elevation to the episcopate is no longer manifested. When his election was confirmed the men who opposed his consecration yielded with brotherly good-will.

Dr. Brooks was born in Boston somewhat more than fifty six years ago. He was graduated at Harvard when twenty years old, and after a course of theological study was admitted to holy orders. From 1859 to 1870 he preached with increasing popularity in Philadelphia. He removed to Boston in 1870, where his triumphs of noble oratory and exemplary manhood are one of the chief glories of the city.

The new bishop has a large and handsome presence. His countenance is singularly expressive and powerful. The rapidity of his utterance, which possibly impairs his delivery, is accompanied with gifts of voice which are wonderfully sympathetic and command earnest attention.

SECOND EDITION.

SAM AND EVA VINDICATED.

Pastor Junor Decides That Their Story is Strictly True.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 15.—The Rev. Mr. Junor started for home this morning satisfied, apparently, that Thornton and Eva are innocent.

"I started out on the assumption that Thornton's story is true, and so far I find nothing to shake my faith in his integrity," said he. "Thornton says that he and Miss Jewell were set ashore on the Atlantic coast not far from the mouth of the St. John's river. The country was, of course, entirely new to them, and the statement that their landing place was between Mayport and Pablo was only a surmise of theirs. I have been all over the country down there and am firmly convinced that it was possible for them to have been landed south of Pablo beach and to have reached Jacksonville in the manner described by them. If they had been landed six miles or more south of Pablo they could have struck out in a north westerly direction, and have reached South Jacksonville by boat and by cars, without any of the geographical impossibilities that some of the newspaper reports have woven about them. They would, of course, have been obliged to cross a railway track once, if not twice, but in their anxiety to reach civilization, they might not noticed this."

"Did you find the house or log cabin where they said they got their breakfast?"

"No, for I did not search for any such house. Mr. Thornton says the report of his story was incorrect in this one particular, and the reporter who got the interview says it is possible that he may have misunderstood Thornton on this one point. It was regarded as a trivial inaccuracy then; now, however, it has a very important bearing upon the case."

Mr. Junor, in his travels, has seen all the attaches of the St. John's house, and discovered the waist of Miss Jewell's dress, which she said was given her by the first Spanish's captain's wife, and the quarters they occupied in the Hudnall block. He talked with the people in the St. John's house and its annex, and found nothing in their testimony to criminate the castaways.
