ROBERT CASSELS IS LIVING.

He Did Not Commit Suicide by Drowning at Sharbot Lake.

Robert Cassels, the long looked for witness in the Goodwin murder case, and who was supposed to have drowned himself while on a visit to a relative, is still alive. Detective Harry Montgomery, of Ottawa, received a telegram from the chief constable at Mattawa, stating that Cassels was there, and enquiring whether he was wanted here. The detective answered that he was not as there was no charge against him. It will be remembered that it was in Cassels' house that Goodwin stopped the night after the murder of Richard Langford, at Carp, took place. Cassels was summoned as a material witness. He appeared before the first sitting of the coroner's jury, but nothing or next to nothing could be elicited from him. His answers to all the questions were characterized as at the least very ungracious. He admitted that Goodwin came into the house that night, but when asked whether he was there when the constable called, said he did not know and declined to give further information when asked why he did not assist the constable in looking for him. When the jury sat again, Cassels failed to turn up. Shortly after that the news came that he had been drowned while visiting friends, and it was supposed at the time that he had committed suicide while in a state of mental aberration caused by the excitement over the murder case. A vigorous search was made for his body, and it was supposed that he had fallen through a water hole made in the ice, as a hat was found close by. Cassels was considered the most important witness for the crown, and it was said that if he had appeared at the second sitting of the inquest the authorities would have been able to extract valuable evidence from him. He was a married man and his son, about twenty-one, was also a witness in the case. He was an intimate friend of Goodwin's and worked with him on several occasions.

THE RIVER ST. LAWRENCE

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM MISS H. BAKER, SYRACUSE.

Gananoque Described as an Americanized Town—A Visit to the Grave of Sir John Macdonald—A Rich Mineral Country Along the Line of the K. & P. RR.—Fishing at Sharbot Lake—The Iron Ore Trade.

About the middle of September after the height of the summer's outing had passed and people had mostly fled to their homes for school and business, we left T. I. P. by the beautiful, swift and convenient steamer New Island Wanderer, for a little trip to the Canadian side. We stopped first at Gananoque, a most beautiful and quite large Americanized town, with its fine manufactories in iron, carriage, nail and farming implements, its revolutionary history, it few ancient and many modern houses, its population of 4,000 or thereabouts, its octogenarian of which every place usually has one, its home comfort giving International hotel where you are made to feel there is no difference between Canadian and American, its beautiful location at the confluence of the Gananoque and St. Lawrence rivers, its cut lying stretch of river filled with the most beautiful of islands that the St. Lawrence with its multitude can give, its block house or old fort which kept them from the intruders and secured to Sir Wm. Johnson and Col. Joel Stone, United Empire Loyalists, the right to serve God under their own vine and fig tree—the history of which we were not able fully then to learn. But after a pleasant time there we stepped aboard a Folger ferry and went to Kingston, that quaint, ancient, historic town, of which we have heretofore written so much, and of which the half cannot be told. We were invited to visit Sir John Macdonald's grave, which we did and paid our respects to his country over his buried body while we held loyal liege to our own, and notwithstanding he did not enter our open doors while living, the time is not far in the future, I predict, when his followers will. Then from Kingston we thought we would like to see how some portions of the province might seem to us away from the river, through the country north or back from the river so we boarded the Kingston & Pembroke train to Sharbot Lake. Part of the way was the best of farming land, then rocks of limestone, then granite boulders and rough, rocky, hilly, wild; but wherever those granite rocks rear their heads underneath wild roughness you will find mica mines, iron ore, silver and gold, and the quantities yet untold; but it is there. Before reaching Sharbot Lake we thought from the beauties of the water, filled with Emerald isles, that really the St. Lawrence was running up stream, and where were we? But the conductor soon set us straight by calling it Sharbot Lake, a beautiful sheet of water filled with large fish and at its upper end a frog pond where you can catch immense creatures and have all the fun you want watching them as they go through their gymnastic exercises and trapeze performances. We caught them with hook and line, and while we felt very wicked in hauling up what seemed the embryo man evolated. Yet we held our sides while we held aloft our pole to let him die. "See him hands!" "See him feet!" "See him arms!" "See him climb!" The little child said. "How to make him die was the question!" Must we hold him suspended in mid-air for hours? Oh, we can not. Philosophies a little, then; try the spinal nerve stunning theory. Yes! now you have him. They are an epicurean dish (the last part of them.) Rough and wild as was the country in those northern miles, yet the people are very intelligent and hospitable, and the driving roads smooth as a house floor, notwithstanding the surrounding rocks. When the duty is taken of iron that part of the country will boom with enterprise, in what is now buried.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Man Traps on Public Roads.

KINGSTON, Nov. 2.—(To the Editor): You are aware of the uneasiness that for some time has pervaded the public mind regarding the unsafe railway crossings in the vicinity of Kingston. Few of the inhabitants have recourse to the statutes, and it is believed there is no law to prevent the railway companies taking possession of public roads and using them as best suits their convenience. Judging from the actions of the G.T.R. this supposition is borne out. Take the crossing at the outer Kingston station, where the company has used the road as a shunting ground for years, and notwithstanding the deaths and accidents that have taken place, the company is engaged in increasing the danger ten-fold by laying additional tracks across the road. This is an outrage for which I doubt if a precedent could be found in the dominion. Can it be possible that the life of a fellow-subject is of so little moment that our legislators have neglected to protect life at such pieces? Does it not seem strange that the law that makes it criminal to place an obstruction upon a railway should permit railway companies to place obstructions on the highways, dangerous to life and property? I think, sir, you will confer a great favor upon the public generally if you publish through your paper what right or power the law gives the railway companies over public highways, for if the law fails to afford protection it becomes the duty of the public to demand from the government such legislation as will be necessary for their protection. Now, sir, I think that a moment's reflection is sufficient to satisfy any rational mind of the unreasonableness of such monopoly over the highways of the country. The ratepayers of both the city and county should unite in preventing the highways from being converted into man-traps so dangerous that life is imperilled each time one passes to or from the public market, or even from places of worship on the Lord's day. So bad has the obstruction become that physicians have refused to attend night calls in the country owing to the danger they are subject to at these crossings. While we admit the usefulness of railways it cannot be said that highways are not essential for the prosperity and conveniences of the people. It is safe to predict that the time is not far distant when the railway company who have neglected to make proper provision for public safety will be made to regret the unhuman act.—Yours, etc., FAIR PLAY.

The Elgin Clerkship.

ELGIN, Nov. 3.—(To the Editor): Mr. McKay having been placed hors de combat in the controversy re Dean, would fain cover up his retreat by placing "Graduate" in the breach. I am afraid "Graduate's" memory is as defective as his own, as I certainly never told him or anyone else that Mr. Dean had ever been in my employ. The facts of the case are: Some few years ago Mr. McKay, learning in some way that I was in need of a bookkeeper, drove down here with young Dean, but, as Mr. Dean has stated, we failed to terms and they left here together. Shortly afterwards another young man from the vicinity of Kingston (whose name it is not necessary to mention) called with a letter from Mr. McKay. Him I engaged and him I found not competent for the work (his work is here to show for itself.) I did not even discharge him, as he left of his own accord after doing some copying, which was all he was qualified for.

I can assure Mr. McKay that I have quite enough to attend to without bothering myself about him, or his college in particular, and any opinion I may have expressed about business colleges has been a general one, and then only when asked for it.—J. R. DARGAVEL.

They Are Coming Here.

Prof. Stevenson and lady will be here on Dec. 10th at a leading hotel, with a most beautiful stock of hair goods, all new styles of wigs, waves, switches; everything that is new in hair goods. A lady in attendance. Remember date. Can take your time and try on all styles.

The humor in "All the Comforts of Home" is unquestionably rich and spicy and like all of Gillette's work, pure and impressive.

CITY AND VICINITY.

A Hackwood's Sad Romance.

James Garneau, of Trout Lake, near Oxpah, died of typhoid fever on Monday. He was to have been married Tuesday, but it was his fate to be buried instead in his wedding garments.

Clothes Line Thieves.

The dark evenings afford an excellent opportunity for thieves in their work of clothes-line stripping. Last night three lines of clothes were stripped. A girl is suspected of being the thief.

Gone to Deseronto.

The following gentlemen left in the K. & P. official coach for Deseronto at noon to-day: Archbishop Cleary, Rev. Fr. Kelly, Messrs. B. W. Folger, James Swift, Dr. Walkem, M. J. Grady, Henry Folger and Porteous.

He Was Punished Severely.

Henry Christmas, arrested in Kingston a few days ago, was tried at Peterboro for disorderly conduct. There were three charges preferred against him, and on each he was found guilty. The fines and costs levied on him amount to $43.45.

Match to be Played Here.

The Empire states: "The exciting fight of last year between Hamilton and Queen's will have a counter part in the struggle for the junior cup. The executive committee of the union decided that the match should be played in Kingston on Saturday."

Police Court—Thursday.

James Hurst was charged with obscene and abusive language towards Mrs. Blakley on Tuesday. He pleaded "not guilty," and said he could bring witnesses to prove his innocence. Mrs. Blakley said the abuse had been going on for some time, but she had no witnesses for this case. The case was adjourned till to-morrow.

Association Football Club.

At a meeting of the association football club held in the drill shed last night Allen McRae was elected captain of the team by acclamation, Armour Reid and J. Elliott withdrawing in his favor. The secretary is negotiating with Prescott for a game here on Thanksgiving day. There are now thirty players to choose a team from.

Sermon on Boodleism.

On Sunday evening at Gananoque, Rev. J. Crossfil preached a sermon on "Boodlers" to a large congregation. His discourse stripped boodling of such little concealment and justification as partizans in Ontario and Quebec are prone to accord it, and showed conclusively that stealing from the public treasury is just as bad as stealing from an individual.

They Will Succeed.

On Monday evening a meeting was held in St. John, N.B., to consider the Macdonald memorial scheme. Sir Leonard Tilley was appointed chairman; the mayor vice-chairman, and J. Douglas Hazen, M.P., secretary-treasurer. The work of canvassing for subscriptions will be done in wards in the city, and in parishes in the county. Another meeting will be held Friday.

A Grand Ball.

The commandant and officers of "A" battery gave a grand ball at the barracks last night. There were about 120 guests present, among whom were militia men of distinction from different parts of the province. Charles Murray, stationed at Malta; P. A. Cayley and C. Van Straubenzie, Gibraltar; B.W. Van Straubenzie, South Wales Borderers, and Capt. Hallowell, 15th batt., Belleville, were among the guests. The battery band furnished the music and a pleasant time was brought to a close at 2 a.m.

A Disastrous Conflagration.

One of the biggest fires that Pittsburg has experienced in some time occurred about half past seven o'clock last night. A barn belonging to Mr. McAdoo, jr. containing a great quantity of grain and numerous farm implements was burned to the ground. The loss will probably exceed $2,500, partly covered by insurance. Incendiarism was the cause. A neighbor said she saw two suspicious looking men in the vicinity of the barn shortly before the fire. The building was insured in the western association for $400.

An Estimable Young Man.

In speaking of the marriage of I. McCammon, Portsmouth, to Miss Kate Etherington, Brockville, the Times says: Miss Nellie Etherington acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Hughes of Kingston did the honors as best man. After the ceremony, which was witnessed by a number of invited guests, the whole party sat down to a sumptious wedding supper. Among the many presents received by the bride was a handsome silver butter cooler with a revolving cover, from the nurses of Rockwood asylum, in which institution she was a nurse for a long time. Another Kingston friend sent a cake basket. The groom is also connected with Rockwood asylum and is an estimable young man.

Official Visit to Wolfe Island.

D. D. M. W. Dunn paid an official visit to Wolfe Island lodge last evening. Bro. Dunn was accompanied by a large delegation from Limestone and Kingston lodges. The visitors were received by a delegation from the Island lodge and escorted to the lodge room. They were received by Dr. Spankie, M.W., who accorded the visitors a hearty welcome. A very pleasant evening was passed of a social nature. Songs by Bros. Galloway, Maule, Crumley and Smeaton, of Kingston, and Bro. Moore, of Wolfe Island, were greatly enjoyed. Speeches by Bros. Dunn, Bawden, Dr. Herald, Going and Greer were well received. After a handsome collation the social enjoyment was continued until 11 p.m., when the visitors departed filled with pleasant remembrances.

THE LATE MRS. PIDGEON.

She Was Highly Respected and is Much Mourned.

Mrs. G. H. Pidgeon passed peacefully away at 5:30 yesterday morning. The deceased was attacked with paralysis on the 26th of October and since then neither recovered speech nor sight. She bore her affliction with marvellous patience. On Sunday she took a change for the better, but on Monday again grew worse and sank gradually until the end. Her maiden name was Katharine Jane Atcheson. She was born at Florence Court, county Fermanagh, in the year 1827. On the voyage to America, in 1847, the deceased lost her father, mother and one of her brothers, a Methodist minister, who died with fever. She then took up residence with her brother, Samuel Atcheson, in Kingston, in the same year. In 1848 she was married to Geo. H. Pidgeon, who is left behind to mourn the loss of an affectionate wife. She was the mother of a family of fifteen, twelve sons and three daughters, only six of whom survive her—five sons, John, Thomas and Richard are married; Robert and George, and one daughter, Ellen Elizabeth, are single. The deceased lady was highly esteemed by all who knew her, and her death will cast a gloom over a large circle of friends.

MISSION AT ALL SAINTS'

Service of Confession and an Address by Rev. Fr. Clark.

At 8 p.m. last night the mission at All Saints', the first in the city for many years, was opened by the Rev. Fr. Clark. After a short service of confession, prayer and praise the missioner addressed those present. As a perfect stranger, he said, he could speak very plainly to them about sin without any suspicion arising that he was hitting at individuals. It was very sad to compare our lives with those of the earliest members of the Catholic church and see how different they were. The four great marks by which a christian was known in the first ages of the church's life were given in the second chapter of Acts. "They continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine and fellowship, and in the breaking of the bread and in the prayers." But we to day could scarce be said to be "steadfast" in any one of these things.

Creeds are reviled, unity broken, and altars deserted, and when this is so, when men and women neglect the observance of their Lord's command, "This do in remembrance of Me," was it likely that they would lead prayerful lives. He would answer for it, they would not. He hoped people in their confessions to God would really confess their sins. Not their sinfulness, that was a very different thing. He did not want those who came to him for help to tell him they were very sinful men. He knew that already. All have sinned. But he wanted to know what they had done, what particular sins they had committed, then he could help them. The missioner then spoke at some length on the love of God, and asked all to bear in mind that although he must speak much about sin and the penalty of sin, and the wrath of God against sin, yet God loves us always, in spite of our sins, and we must not let the thought of His wrath displace the remembrance of His love. The mission service is held every night at 8 p.m. Celebration of the Holy Eucharist each morning at 7:30. The celebration at 6 a.m. will not be continued.

REV. R. F. TAYLOR

Presides Over an Enterprising Congregation in Quebec.

On Wednesday last the foundation stone of the Church of St. John the Divine at Wardon, P.Q., was laid with the customary ceremonies, by Ven. Archdeacon Lindsay, assisted by Rev. C. P. Abbott, Rev. J. W. Garland and Rev. R. F. Taylor, the devoted and energetic incumbent of the mission. A short service was held before dinner and the foundation stone was laid only after the inner man had been suitably refreshed. Archdeacon Lindsay, in his address to the congregation, gave a history of the parish naming the clergymen who had ministered to the people under his direction. Rev. Buxton Smith was one.

Warden has been a sort of training school for young clergymen. The archdeacon praised the energy and zeal of the present incumbent, Rev. Mr. Taylor, and complimented him warmly on the success that has attended his ministry. Rev. Mr. Taylor thanked the archdeacon and his brother clergymen for their presence and assistance.

The new church is to cost $1,000 and will be ready about Christmas.

THE WAR CLOUD.

Abdurrahman Khan, Ameer of Cabul—In the Pay of England.

The ameer of Cabul reigns over the country between British India and Russian territory, with undefined boundaries through a large extent of land in the direction of the czar's territory. Russian military exploring parties are represented to be making aggressions on territory which might be claimed by the ameer or the Emperor of China, and there is danger in the situation, oldtimers on both sides representing themselves to be wronged. The ameer is in the pay of England, and is virtually a vassal of that power, and an attack on him by Russia would therefore involve in all probability, what was threatened imminently only a few years ago, a fight between the bear and the lion. The real cause of the friction between the two great powers is the desire of Russia to deprive England of India. In strengthening her frontiers England is able to count upon the unbridled good-will and support of the Ameer. On the other hand Russian aggression is untiring and unceasingly vigilant. The next great European war will, not improbably, break out in Central Asia and where the line between Russia and the Ameer's possessions are not properly defined.
