Take the case of Lillie O'Keefe, for example. She is a stout, full faced young woman, who apparently healtated at noth-ing to accomplish her ends. Awhile ago she rented a room of Mrs. Jessie Elliott, who lives at 145 Sixth avenue, New York. She cultivated friendly relations with the landlady, with her sister, Miss Florence Adams, and even with the buxom colored servant, Hattie Thompson. By this means she got the run of the house, and visited the kitchen and other apartments at will. She claimed to be a milliner, and said she had lately disposed of her business. At any rate she had no lack of money.

Miss O'Keefe and Miss Adams were i volved in several discussions on religious topics, and after one particularly heated controversy the former expressed a desire to polson the latter. The quarrel was smoothed over, however, and when Mrs. Eillott feil ill the roomer nursed her and also condescended to wear the invalid's diamond earrings until requested to leave them alone. The catastrophe came on a recent Monday morning. Mrs. Elliott drank some milk and grew much worse Miss Adams and the negro girl attended to the patient while Miss O'Keefe cooked

After they had eaten they suffered flerce torments of thirst and pain. The roomer kept on cooking and nursing, and all the time her three companions drifted closer to the gates of death. They managed to summon a doctor, and his first exclamation

The Always Faithful Bog. It is a queer phase of life that a dog will remain faithful to a man after he has been given up by wife, family and friends. The M. FLANAGAN, District Agent brute continues its affection where all other living creatures have renounced even recognition. A case in point is that of George Melbur, of Schenectady, N. Y. He was the victim of a prolonged spree, and ran about brandishing a ragor and threatening slaughter. Then he rowed to an island near by and cut his throat. There the body was found, guarded by a canine triend of many years. Secure Your Hyacintha
