LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

A Stirring Condemnation.

KINGSTON, Nov. 19.—(To the Editor): Judging from your report of the city council meeting a cat fight on a tin roof would be sweet and noble music to a dispeptic's ears compared with the cock pit, bull ring, language of the Æolian-harped-voiced-dentrifical aldermen from Cataraqui ward. This same Ald. Gaskin is anxious to represent this decent old city at Ottawa. What a fine brace Gaskin and Metcalfe would make as the city's parliamentary representatives. The Chicago world's fair managers, having requested a contribution from Kingston, what more attractive objects can we send than life-sized pictures of the local member for the city and county, and a statue in brass of John Gaskin, praying for damaged grain, and more coal cargoes to deliver to the city at water works wharf. Let the whole world gaze on our great living curiosities and thus encourage emigration. The mayor should remind the Cataraqui orator that while he sits at the council board he is not licensed to use the abuse he commonly hurls at poor employees of the great Montreal transportation company. Capable, honest and respectable men, will not be anxious to enter the council and be associated with bullies. Is it not time for electors to realize that the council should be purged of billingsgate representatives? What will the outside public think of us if we continue to allow ourselves to be disgraced by unmitigated ruffianism.

How many good men have been driven out of the council by one abusive man to the great injury of the public interest? The uncalled for and ungentlemanly attack on Ald. Polson and ex Ald. Fenwick was extremely disgraceful and the mayor is open to severe censure for allowing it. If gentlemen can get no more protection than was granted Ald. Polson, look for a New York bowery representative at the council. Are we, as citizens going to have it?—CATARAQUI.

Event at Portsmouth.

The Royal Templars of Temperance held a large and enthusiastic meeting in the Orange hall, at Portsmouth, last evening. Several of the city brethren were present and about twenty representatives from the Gananoque lodge. Robert Taggart, '93, gave one of his catchy Irish recitations. J. W. McLean also gave a recitation which was loudly applauded. N. A. McPherson, B.A., and others, gave addresses, after which refreshments were served in grand style. About 200 were present.

Death of Rev. W. Brown.

Rev. William Brown, one of the oldest of the pioneer Episcopal Methodist ministers of Canada, died at Iroquois on Nov. 16th. About a year ago he was stricken with paralysis, but recovered to a great extent. On Sunday last he attended church, and in the evening took a great interest in the eclipse. At bedtime he, with his family, retired, but in a short time his daughter, hearing an unusual sound in his room, rushed in and found the old gentleman prostrate in his accustomed position for prayer. He was laid on the couch and medical aid summoned, but he lasted only a few hours. He was born on the old Brown homestead, near Elgin, and was in his seventy-seventh year at the time of his death. He entered the ministry of the old M. E. church when young and was one of its most prominent preachers. Just before the union he was superannuated, and settled at Iroquois. During his itinerancy he was stationed on nearly every circuit in the old Bay of Quinte district.

A MIGHTY DOMINION.

THANKSGIVING SERMON BY REV. MALCOLM MACGILLIVRAY.

Individual and National Righteousness Required—The Divine Care—Our Many Institutions Free, Popular and Progressive—The Pulse of Life Beats Fast.

At the request of many persons we have decided to publish the Thanksgiving sermon of Rev. M. Macgillivray, M.A., of Chalmers church. We will issue it in three sections. The sermon was delivered in Cooke's church, from Deut. xi, 12:

"A land which the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year."

How far does this description suit the condition of things in our dominion? Why should it not be entirely suitable? There certainly can be no reminiscence on the part of God's care. The tokens of His regard are many—proof enough that His observant eyes are upon us. But to realize the glorious facts of the divine care and the divine watchfulness, the Canadian people must yield themselves to God in the spirit and service of individual and national righteousness. The divine care, in itself and in its results, is always benign, but apparently so only to the individual or nation that loves and keeps the divine law; to the disobedient and unthankful it may appear the very opposite of benign. The loving care that corrects man yields the fruit of righteousness only to him who understands the process, and thankfully accepts the results, but it only hardens and embitters him who refuses to submit to the correction, and profit by the results.

"A land which the Lord careth for!" That picture was drawn of Palestine of old, the land of promise, the glory of all lands! It contained everything required to make a perfect nation: (1) God cared for it. The land itself was His and He made a free gift of it to His people. The people also were His; a "chosen people," and His desire was that they should dwell a holy nation in a free and fruitful land. And does not God care for Canada? What a blessing this country has been to ourselves and to our fathers before us? May we so use our privileges, so profit by the divine care and thoughtfulness, that it may be even a greater blessing to our children after us. Our country is a sacred trust, and ours only in the using. It belongs to God and to the future. And as it passes out of our hands, and its free and generous soil covers our bones, let it remain a splendid heritage for our successors.

(2) One of Palestine's brightest glories was its freedom. God wished it to be subject to none but Himself, and that was the true freedom, for "where the spirit of the good is, there is liberty." II Cor. iii, 17. When the people deposed Him from the kingship, and another spirit than His moulded life, they fell into servitude and apostacy, now of one kind and now of another, and entered on the path of dishonor and decay; and after passing through almost unparalleled humiliation and misfortune their name passed out of history.

We are among the most youthful of nations, being only in the third decade of our existence; we are, therefore, in a position to profit by the wisdom and the failure of other peoples whose records and experience are before us. If we are wise, and teachable and high-principled, we may begin with the social, and educational, and political, and commercial, and religious wisdom which the unbounded past has accumulated for us. "All things are ours!" When we think of this good fortune, we stand awed in the presence of the wealth and equipment ready for our use, and waiting to be employed and turned to larger account in the wide and various activities of our lives. But "to whom much is given, of them much shall be required." God is our king, too, and the divine care, and the divine watchfulness will not permit us, any more than the old Hebrews, to abuse our privileges or pervert our freedom.

Our institutions of every kind, municipal, legislative, educative, religious are as free and popular and progressive and accessible as can be desired; and they are elastic enough, when change becomes needful, through enlarged life and modified circumstances, to permit that change to take place without any violent disturbance of the existing order of things. In the meantime, let the heart of the people be sound, let individual and national righteousness prevail, and whatever changes may come will come from Him who careth for our land, and whose All-Seeing eyes are upon it.

(3) The old land for which God cared, was a land that "flowed with milk and honey." It was a productive land. It yielded plentifully to the hand that dressed it; and the most joyful season of the Jewish year was that in which the people in festive assembly returned thanks to God for the fruits of the flocks and herds and the vineyards and the fields.

And is Canada not a productive land? Without indulging in the extravagant rhapsodies which we sometime hear about our boundless territory, our inexhaustible wealth of forest and mine, and ocean and river, and prairie, and about the fabulous millions who are to populate the land in the indefinite future, we may take less room and less rhetoric to describe things as they are, and as they shall be, and discover that the picture is still one of uncommon brightness and interest. We have every variety of soil, yielding as it is touched by the hand of man, almost every product common to the higher temperate latitudes, and essential to man's vigorous physical development, and well-being. And our climate, as has been said, is so invigorating as to make toil a pleasure.

If we have not the largest and most valuable forests in the world, they are certainly very large and valuable. Our mines are rich in the baser and nobler metals, so far as discovered; and the indications are that further discoveries and enterprise will but greatly enlarge the area and value of these deposits. In the east and west are coal fields of immense extent and value. Our rivers and lakes and ocean coasts abound in fish of great commercial importance and in themselves are unsurpassed for grandeur and magnitude.

On our shores we have the highways of the two great oceans, and our country is a meeting point for the commerce, the immigration, the civilizations of the east and west of Europe and Asia. These facts would seem to indicate that we have an important destiny committed to us to work out on this continent. Our position and possibilities cannot be surpassed in the interest they awaken in thoughtful minds and the grave responsibilities which they impose upon us as a people. The foundations, therefore, cannot be too carefully laid. We should try and be entirely clear as to the fundamental principles which shall govern us. We should bear in mind that the pulse of life beats fast in this age. More energy and movement and change may be crowded into twenty-five years now than in four times that many less than a century ago. Blunders and false principles are, therefore, all the more to be dreaded, for they invoke perilous consequences that develop rapidly, while generations may be required to undo their evil work. As I hope to show before I am done we are now passing through humiliation and loss because of wrong steps taken in the past, and when we talk resolutely about the cure we are met with the threat that our whole confederation may tumble in pieces about our ears. And there is no doubt that there are disintegrating forces behind those threats, and that they may, under the stimulation of legislative blundering, or popular passion, or corrupt administration of any moment, develop into a formidable danger. So there is every need that God should care for our land, and that we should all be faithful stewards under Him. Therefore let us draw near to Him to-day in thanksgiving and supplication; thanksgiving for the mercies that we have received and supplication for the mercies that we require.

CITY AND VICINITY.

To Be Formally Opened.

The G. T. R. double track between Ballantyne and Gananoque will be formally opened on Sunday. The contract was completed Saturday night.

The Tramp Nuisance.

The tramps throughout the country are now on the look out for shelter. No less than ten typical "millionaires" received protection in the cells last night. Something should be done to abate the nuisance of so many undesirable callers.

Commission In Session.

The first Ontario drainage commission is meeting in Toronto. It is intended to provide a better means than litigation for the settling of drainage disputes, which are usually based on technical issues. R. M. Britton, Q. C., is referee of the commission.

A Rare Treat Coming.

A gang of Italians camped near Ballantyne station yesterday killed a large spaniel dog they had been fattening during the past few weeks for a grand feast. The carcase now hangs in quarters about the walls and will be preserved for their christmas dinner.

A Club to be Organized.

There is considerable talk among the elite young men of the city with reference to the organization of a club for the winter months. The intention is to allow no one but respectable young men to join. The rooms would be elegantly furnished and equipped with all the modern conveniences.

The Macdonald Memorial.

The subscription list of Niagara for the Macdonald memorial fund has been completed. The collections amounted to $80, which sum has been forwarded the treasurer of the committee at Kingston. Berlin, Waterloo and Preston are making a good showing. What's the matter with the Kingston collectors?

Great Stock of Ammunition.

A short time ago 1,000,000 rounds of ball cartridge were stored in the magazines at the fort by John O'Brien, government carter. Nine hundred and eighty-nine boxes came over the Grand Trunk railway and 1,095 boxes were brought over the C.P.R. The ammunition was drawn from the city to the fort in six days.

Returned to the Asylum

Patrick Ryan, confined in Rockwood asylum for five years, escaped last Saturday and tramped home, arriving there Sunday. The authorities were notified and an attendant visited Ryan's home Tuesday afternoon. He declined first to go with the officers but after coaxing and threatening made up his mind to come back and was brought to Kingston on the mixed train.

Killed by a Cow.

A four year old daughter of David Gillespie, farmer, township of Fitzroy, met her death on Saturday. She was playing with a dog in the barnyard, and followed the animal into a cow byre. In running about the byre she accidentally fell underneath the cow's feet. The latter moved about, trod on the child's face and head and inflicted a fatal fracture of the skull, partially crushed in. The poor little victim lived less than an hour in great agony.

Drowned Off a Schooner.

Yesterday afternoon while the schr. McBride was running light to Gananoque, W. Acton, eighteen years of age, son of the captain, was knocked off the boat, by the tiller, opposite Knapp's Point, and was drowned. As soon as the boy was missed his father started out to look for him in a yawl boat, but was unable to find him. The captain was picked up by the str. Pierrepont on her way to Gananoque. Captain Acton's grief at the loss of his son was indescribable.

He Believes in It.

Rev. Dr. Sexton was asked last night to explain hypnotism and to state whether it should be generally studied. The doctor admitted that there was much in it and gave the history of its origin. He held that there was danger in its performance, but many things in science were dangerous. He thought doctors should possess a knowledge of it, and, because of its danger, laws should be passed to regulate and save mankind from evil designers. He did not think hypnotism would be followed to any great extent as the number who could be affected was small compared with the world's population.

Talking of Drinking.

A questioner asked Rev. Dr. Sexton if drunkards could not inherit heaven, was there a hope of the salvation of drinkers and what the difference was between a fellow having "a private jar at home" and going for drinks to a saloon. The doctor said he dare not sweepingly condemn all who drank liquor. In bygone ages the indulgence in beverages was commonly practised; in later times it has been proved that alcoholic drinks are not beneficial and abstinence is to be encouraged. He advised the questioner to abstain from the private jar as well as the saloon.

Discovered in Time.

A fire occurred this morning in McKelvey & Birch's machine room, by which a screwing machine was partially destroyed. The fire was discovered by Mr. McKelvey, who went to the store early in the morning. When he looked in the machine room the blaze was touching the ceiling. Had the fire not been seen in time much damage would have been the result. The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion and started from steel shavings saturated with oil. A board under the machine for holding dies was destroyed. The damage to the machine by fire and water is estimated at about $200 and is covered by insurance. The firemen arrived at the scene promptly.

Police Court—Thursday.

James Lawless, a lad of thirteen summers, was before the magistrate, this morning, charged with an infraction of the water works act. Superintendent Hewitt said the boy had taken water from the hydrant on the corner of Johnston and Barrie streets several times. He did not wish to prosecute the lad, but merely wanted a stop put to the practice. James Lawless, sr., said he had never known his son to take the water before this time. The boy pleaded guilty to the charge, and said the reason he took the water was because he could not get it clean enough out of the lake. The colonel inflicted a fine of $2 and costs or ten days in jail. The father said the boy was continually playing truant from school and he could do nothing with him. He thought a few days in jail would do him good. He was sent up.

Purchased the Distillery.

L. H. Clark & Co., a wealthy firm of Toronto, have purchased the property on King street known as Morton's distillery. The buildings will be improved and the malting business carried on on a large scale. The firm carried on business in Toronto in rented buildings which they tried to purchase, but failed. A syndicate put up more money and got the property. Mr. Clark arrived last evening to superintend the work of getting the buildings in order. The machinery will be brought from Toronto, and when it is placed in position and the works are ready for operation about thirty men will be employed. Kingston will be greatly benefited by the new industry. A large warehouse and wharf will be built so that vessels can unload barley, of which 150,000 bushels will be needed, forming a market for Kingston district in itself. The firm also carry on an establishment at Palmerston.

Rev. Dr. Sexton says he believes in "instantaneous conversion"—turning around squarely and in a hurry. But after acts proved the sincerity of the conversion. The doctor did not believe in "final restoration." Men who refused to accept God would never ask for it afterwards. Spiritual blindness followed constant living in the dark.

REV. DR. SEXTON ON EVOLUTION.

An Interesting Address in Sydenham Street Church.

Last evening a very large crowd assembled in Sydenham street church, to hear the Rev. Dr. Sexton discourse on the "Facts and Fallacies of Evolution." Principal Grant occupied the chair, and introduced the lecturer in a few eulogistic remarks. The doctor, in his lecture, travelled over a vast amount of ground of a scientific character, and spoke rapidly for an hour and a half without a note. He pointed out that no theory of evolution had accounted for the origin of life, and that all experiments made with a view to produce living beings from non-living matter had failed. Between the organic and the inorganic was a chasm which had not been bridged. He then examined, at great length, the various theories that had been put forth to account for the variations of animals and plants, dwelling especially on Darwin's hypothesis of natural selection. He did not consider any of those sufficient to explain the facts. At the same time evolution itself may be true, while all the present theories as to its mode of working are false. Coming to the origin of man he said that evolution would not here apply, because the changes which were supposed to occur would have been to the disadvantage of the organism, and would have destroyed rather than perpetuated the race. Parts of the lecture were humorous, although most of it was profoundly scientific. At the close of the lecture a great many questions were handed in upon almost every conceivable subject, which the doctor answered most satisfactorily without the slightest hesitation. [illegible] described the [illegible] as [illegible] consequence of their diversity. It was half-past ten before the meeting was closed, and yet so interested was the large audience that no one left till the close. The doctor lectures again to-night in Queen street church.
