THE DAILY WHIG. 'Opifer per Orbem Dicor.'

The friends of Dr. Montague, the unseated of Haldimand, are greatly annoyed that he should have to go through another election. He's so smart, you know. He had the smartness to issue a paper in the queen's name, directing the Indians as to how they should vote. And he's troubled about how he can again impose upon the red men without getting himself into trouble. Yes, he's very smart, and pure, and high-minded!

The board of trade will probably discuss the affairs of the Midland agricultural association on Friday evening and urge the favourable consideration of them by the council. The city should certainly do something handsome in the interests of the exhibition. It is calculated to bring the people here, to help business, to help every local interest, and to that end should be aided by the councils of the city and county in a substantial way.

The Whig said that in the election of Mr. Twomey, as mayor of Windsor, the cause of annexation had been made as conspicuous as if Mr. Sol. White had been elected, that Mr. Twomey was as great an annexationist as his late opponent. And the Tory press shouts 'No, no.' Well, what says Mr. Twomey himself? That he is 'in favor of the broadest possible reciprocal trade relations with the United States.' And has the conservative press not declared that this would lead to annexation? Then what is all the row about?

The Montreal Star announces that 'the franchise will be dealt with this session and no doubt the voters' lists will be got ready.' We hope so. These lists have not been corrected for three years, and in the bye-elections lately taking place a great injustice has been done to many of the young electors. It is a scandal that any one should be deprived of the exercise by reason of governmental neglect or indifference, that this condition of things, so retrograde, so injurious, should be the result of taking the lists out of the hands of the provincial authorities by whom they were properly prepared.

What does all this mean? Sir John has promised the workmen that he will put an end to assisted immigration, to the importation of foreign labour under contract (excepting the British), to extend the franchise act and adopt manhood suffrage, and if possible womanhood suffrage, and see if he can do away with the depositing of $200 in the name of a candidate for parliamentary honors. He is also in favour of establishing a labour day (to be a legal holiday) improving the Seamen's act, and providing for the better inspection of vessels. And certainly Sir John should not be allowed to forget his promises. The legislative committee should see to it that he does not indulge in plausible talk for election purposes. The workmen are not to be fooled with.

We are getting an insight into the nature of the quarrels between Mr. Nicholas Flood Davin, the fanciful poet of the prairies, and the officers of the North-West mounted police. Mr. Davin's earliest experiences with the police were not the happiest. They were the development of a serious row regarding the possession of a flask of cognac which he was taking into his new home for medicinal purpose, of course, and which was confiscated as contraband goods. Peace between the warring elements was proclaimed after a time, but not for long. Again and again Mr. Davin had occasion to deal heroically with the police, and to point out the danger of trifling with his importance, and again and again he extended the hand of friendship and asked that the past should be forgotten. Now, however, the difference of opinion between him and the commandant of the North-West mounted police is beyond reconciliation. One day he stormed because the love making of a full private and one of Regina's blooming maidens should have been interrupted by the sending of the young man upon a distinct mission, and he demanded satisfaction for the heartaches so unnecessarily inflicted by the separation. The next day he applied for the services of a number of the mounted police at a social swell-out which he was conducting. He wanted them to act as waiters, as social lackeys, and because the first officer at Regina said the government was not supporting the force for such a purpose, that he had some consideration for the men's feelings and position, Mr. Davin got mad, and vowed that somebody would go. As a member of parliament he expects to make a sensation in Ottawa, but he may have a time of it abolishing the mounted police simply because they will not polish his boots and serve his soup. He is making enough out of the government to hire a valet—or a wet nurse.

Ode to the tailor—A suit.

A MAN OF MANY NAMES.

Many Wives and Many Occupations—A Thorough-paced Scoundrel. Montreal Star.

During Christmas week Montreal was the asylum of a clever young scoundrel named Silas N. Seymore. He was introduced there, quite innocently, by J. M. Conroy, clothier, whom he met in Kingston and tried to cheat out of $9,000 on the pretence of buying out his Quebec store, giving a mortgage on two supposed farms owned by him, and valued at some $3,000 each, as his security. While doing this he prevailed upon a demi-madame here to pose as his wife under promise of taking her with him to Quebec. He introduced her to Mr. Conroy and several wholesale merchants as his wife, but being found out and advised to drop her did so, leaving the girl without money, not even paying for his or her board at a second class hotel where they were boarding. Mr. Conroy was informed that Seymore tried to sell the stock at half price, and at almost the same time Messrs. Atwater & Mackie, Mr. Conroy's attorneys, received information with newspaper clippings attached which went to show that Seymore had been in the penitentiary for bigamy, and that, but for the death of one of them, he would have four wives living. Previous to his meeting Mr. Conroy it seems that he stole a horse and buggy from a Brockville livery keeper, but was caught at Gananoque, without being prosecuted, however, as he gave up his watch and chain. Shortly after he committed the same offence in Watertown, was traced to Alexandria, where he sold the robe, and later on to Ogdensburg, where he sold the horse and buggy, each to a different person; making his escape and turning up in Kingston next. When Mr. Conroy obtained these proofs of his perfidy Seymore was put in gaol on a capias and kept there for a month alternatively threatening and begging for his liberty, which was given him at last, as he was not worth a cent. He left gaol about December, and the next heard of him was in the St. Catherine street store of A. W. Clarke, bookseller, who employed him for the Christmas trade. He was a first class salesman, but so much of his receipts passed into his private exchequer that Mr. Clarke thought it best to discharge him. Seymore accordingly left the Saturday before Christmas, drawing his money and notifying the young lady in the store that he was going to be married that night. In the name of his employer he tried to have Mr. McIntyre, tailor, Beaver hall, make him an expensive winter suit, but was prevented by Mr. Clarke hearing of the scheme, afterwards, however, cheating Mr. Grundle, the tailor on the corner of Beaver hall hill and Dorchester, out of another suit. On the Saturday before Christmas he engaged a room and board at 27 Brunswick street for himself and wife, who had gone to Ottawa on a vacation. He stated that he owned a piano and various other articles of furniture, but would want to bring them in till it had stopped raining. He also stated that he was going to buy out Mr. Clarke's branch store on St. Catherine street, and on the strength of this, borrowed various amounts of various gullible people. He suddenly left a week later without paying his board, and after a vain attempt to take a valuable overcoat with him. Next he turned up at the store of J. H. Prince, on St. Lawrence street, who sells jewellery and furniture on easy payments. He engaged as canvasser and cheated that gentleman out of some $15 worth of goods. The latest news Mr. Prince heard about him came in the shape of a bill from a Cornwall livery stable keeper. It was in Cornwall that his latest matrimonial venture occurred.

The Sunday sleet storm wrecked the telegraph wires and many poles; great damage done to fruit and ornamental trees; some fine orchards half ruined.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Cases of Missed Charity. KINGSTON, Jan. 16.—(To the Editor): In noticing the case of a family of English emigrants whose disreputable conduct has lately attracted public notice, you remark upon the frequency of imposture and the need for thorough investigation. I may add that this instance shows also the benefits of entrusting the distribution of charity to an organized society, which always institutes searching enquiry in regard to cases of application for relief. Now this family, by their persistent begging, excited the compassion of many kind individuals, who, besides helping them themselves, applied for fuel for them from the Poor Relief association. A little wood was once given them from this society, but as further enquiry by the society revealed the true character of the family no further relief was given from that society, notwithstanding repeated requests for it. The moral is obvious. If you have not time to make enquiry hand over the case to those who will. Aims, given without careful investigation into the circumstances of the applicants is much more likely to do harm than good.

It is for such reasons that our citizens should be glad to sustain liberally those charitable institutions, which undertake, without fee or reward, the by no means trifling labour and responsibility of relieving real need, while at the same time discouraging plausible imposture.—CHARITY.

Celebrated Gardens.

The celebrated 'Hanging Gardens of Babylon' were within the precincts of the palace called 'The Admiration of Mankind' They consisted of gardens of trees and flowers on the topmost of a series of arches 75 feet high and built in the form of a square, each side of which measured 400 Greek feet. Over 2,500 years later we find the celebrated gardens of James Vick in Rochester, New York. For description, catalogue of seeds, advice how to obtain free a copy of Vick's floral guide and also of the famous new rose called 'Vick's Caprice,' address, James Vick, seedman, Rochester, N.Y.

Send, brother, seed with care. Three nickles to Vick, of Rochester. And in quick trip time you'll get from there A book full of seeds and plants so rare. Send, brother, seed with care. For the Floral Guide from Rochester, N.Y.

They Have Been Released. Captain Georgeghan, assistant outside manager of the M. I. company, and Mr. Kane, night watchman for the same firm, have been dismissed. It is said they were released because they were not sufficiently careful of the company's property on the night of the recent heavy gale, when the tug Walker drifted from her moorings to Barrieheld beach.

WOODS' FAIR AND 7c. STORE. GREAT CLEARING SALE.

ON SATURDAY, JAN. 12TH, we will commence our great clearing sale. Encouraged by the success of our last January clearing sale we have determined to make this January clearing sale the greatest attraction of the season; these are no idle words. The great public in this enlightened age is not to be led astray by bluster, but honest reliable facts, told in these columns have always met with prompt attention from the intelligent readers of this paper, and to them we say, do not delay, delays are dangerous. Our slaughter bargains will be spread upon our counters for you Saturday; be on hand early and secure the best selections. Our first slaughter will be 12 dozen best gilt-handled oval boxes, 18c. each; these goods were not for Wood's Fair, would be sold in your city to-day for $1 each. One extra heavy English net halter with very strong tie, just the halter for farmers for their colts, usually sold at 50c per piece, 19c.; one 10 quart galvanized pail, very durable, never rusts, with 35c. our sweeping price 15c.; this is one of the greatest bargains ever offered by us; and to prevent the trade from snatching them up we have decided not to sell over two to any one party. Sleighs, hats and mothers now in from our carload, but enough, and we will sell you a large 3 bent-knee sled (regular price 75c., slaughtered price 25c.; hands me large swan necked tipped sleigh, worth $1, slaughtered price 30c. Fathers and mothers now is your golden opportunity, improve it. Plush goods, we bought this season a immense stock, and received thereby special cut prices, and have been selling them so low that I have been astonished how we could afford to sell such elegant goods for such low prices; yet for the month of January we will drop these into our slaughtered list of 25 per cent discount. This will bring an imitation leather dressing case down to 75c., and an elegant silk plush one down to 60c. Don't neglect to see this line of goods while the great slaughter sale is going on.
