BURDETTE'S PHILOSOPHY.

PIRATES, WHEREVER THEY ARE. Pepsin, who is a poor sailor, is dismayed to see signs of rough weather in the combing waves. "Oh, shoot the white caps!" he exclaims. "That's just what Governor Foraker says," said his uncle. "Why, has he been to sea?" "No," replied his uncle, "he hasn't been to see, but he's heard tell of 'em.' TIE UP YOUR DOG.

Every two or three days people read of a daring robbery, and the account closes with the statement that 'blood- Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis, hounds will be used to trail the robbers.' And it may be confidently asserted that bloodhound hasn't caught a robber during the past 800,000 years. Bloodhounds have caught runaway slaves, escaping prisoners, unarmed, half starved, weak and naked, but when it comes to trailing a train robber, bristling with "Winchesters" and "Navy sixes," the bioodhound develops an intelligent sagacity that is fairly human. SLOWER THAN CHRISTMAS.

Yes, my son, yes, Philadelphia is a slow old town-a slow, pokey, checker board Quaker town. It is, as you say, an overgrown country village. One of the villagers has just given $1,500,000 for the establishment of a free school of mechanical trades, wherein the instruction, boarding and lodging are to be free. The villager has done all this very quietly, while New York is loudly declaring what a monument she would build to the memory of Grant if somebody else would furnish the money. Oh, yes! Philadel phia is a slow town. There is no life in it. Once in a while a villager like Isaiah Williamson gets off a joke of the industrial school pattern that makes the angels laugh. But your jokes about Philadelphia, my son, make other people laugh. Yes, indeed. Got one ready now? Well, fire it off, and we'll listen to the crackling of the thorns. How cheerful they sound. Pity they don't last longer.— Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

Three Great Men.

We had the honor of meeting Mr. Grady and Joel Chandler Harris, who lighted up our boudoir at the Kimball house for an hour or so. Harris in The Constitution says that I am a homely man. He says that the pictures of myself as compiled by McDougall are good, but softened very much by the tender feelings and kind heart of the artist.

Mr. Harris does not allow his portrait to be published. That shows that he is not utterly lost to all those finer feelings which go to make men lay over, as it were, the brute creation. Mr. Harris is a plain man, but good. He has a massive head, which he uses in thinking. Enemies have said that his hair was red. It is not. His mustache has a bright, ruddy glow on it, but his hair is not red. That is, it is not so very red.

Joel Chandler Harris is a modest man, but he is a great man, and I rise superior to all petty prejudice to so state. His causeless attack on my personal appearance can never make me so far forget the eternal principles of justice as to say that Joel Chandler is not the author of one of the best pieces of work in the modern category of literature. I care not that he has said of me that I am as plain as a swollen basswood god from Farther India. Let those who have been blest, like Mr. Harris, with the fatal gift of beauty, hurl the first stone at me, and then let others follow in rapid succession. It matters not. I will be just. Mr. Harris has a kindly eye that looks earnestly at things which he desires to observe. In this it is assisted by the other eve, which resembles it in many re-

I was also wrong about his voice. thought from his utterances that he had a voice like Alexander the Great and could easily address a mile track without getting red in the face, but his voice is rather high, though clear and penetrating. The Gills of Fish.

Lift up the gill covers and under them will be seen a soft, dark red mass, not unlike a slice of raw liver. This is part of the gills. Leave them for the present and open the mouth. To all appearances it is rather a small mouth in proportion to the size of the fish. Nothing worthy of notice will be seen at first, the only objects within the mouth being the tongue, which is quite small and hard, and a number of pink projections arranged in successive rows and looking like long and very slender teeth. By this time the water will have become much discolored and must be changed, a slight, dark red stream continually oozing from beneath the gill covers. Before placing the fish in fresh water take it to a tap and allow a stream of water to flow into its mouth and out at the gill covers. How is this? The scarlet hue of the head is rapidly paling, and in a few minutes disappears altogether. It does not belong to the living fish, although most persons assume that the scarlet hue is the normal color of the herring's head. The living fish is of a pure silvery white, as I have often had the opportunity of seeing. The red hue only shows itself after the fish has been removed from the water, and is due to extravasated blood. Again look under the gill covers. The gills are there, but so altered as scarcely to be recognized as the dark red masses which were seen before. They have lost all their color, the water having washed the blood out of them, and are now pale gray. Moreover, they are evidently not solid masses, but are composed of several layers, each layer being formed of a vast number of delicate plates, leaflets, or laminæ,-Longman's Magazine.

ADVICE TO INVALIDS—If you wish to obtain quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache relief from pain and anguish to calm and assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorating the nervous media, and regulating the circulating systems of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne (late Army Medical Staff) to which he gave the name of CHLORODYNE, and which is admitted by the profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. From Symnes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Medical Hall, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. Davenport, Esq., 33 Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, London. Dear Sir, -- We embrace this op portunity of congratulating you upon the wide-spread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility we must question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and judging from their sale, we fancy that their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances "ad infinitum" of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera, Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forn s of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Coliis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of the opinion that the substitution of of any other than Collis Browne's is a

AN ELECTION IN LONDON.

An Event in Which Politics is Lost Sight of and Almost Completely.

LONDON, Jan. 15. - London is in the midst of a general election. Thursday next will see polling in fifty-seven out of fifty-eight divisions of the metropolis for the first London county council. Appeals to the electors appear on every boarding, and the letter boxes are stuffed full of addresses, but comparatively few people appear to understand what the functions of the new yard?" "Yes, but the green doctor makes | body will be. Politics will not enter largely into the question. Lord Rosebery and Sir John Lubbock, two of the best known candidates, have the support of electors belonging to both parties. Lady Sandhurst, who, as one of the promoters of the women's liberal league, received a letter from Mrs. Gladstone recommending her election, stands professedly as a radical for Briston, but it is doubtful whether she would be allowed to sit if elected. Most of the candidates, irrespective of political creed, advocate extended powers. The London council has no voice in such vital questions as water lighting and paving, which remain, as before, in the hands of the parish vestories.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR.

Application Likely to be Made to Parliament for an Allowance For Him. LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Prince of Wales and the prime minister have been in correspondence regarding the position of the eldest son of the heir-apparent. What negotiatiations have been made no one quite knows, but when parliament meets it is expected that the announcement will be made that as soon as Prince Albert Victor decides to marry application will be made to parliament for an allowance for him. It is not likely than even the radicals, who have hitherto opposed royal grants, will oppose one being made to the eldest son of the Prince of Wales, as it has always been admitted that male members of the royal family in the direct succession to the throne should be provided for by the state. Before, however, any measure for conferring an income on Prince Albert Victor is passed some questions will probably be asked ragarding the recent savings in the civil list, as it is not proposed that the young prince shall benefit by them.
