Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance, personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of he hair, this preparation gives it a lustre and pliancy that adds greatly to its charm. Should the liair be thin, harsh, restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, coul, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

"I am free to confess that a trial of Aver's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only can sed the hair of my wife and da ighter to be.

Abundant and Giossy,

but it has given my rather stanted musto the a respectable length and appeararrea" - R. Britton, Orkland, Ohio.

" My hair was coming out (without now assistance from my wife, either). I tried Aver's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as time a nead of hair as any one could wish for." -R. T. Schmitton, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Aver's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, an t-regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the mair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long tune with most satisfactory results." -- Benjunin M. Johnson, M. D., Thomas Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Aver's Hur Vigor it grew black and glossy. current express the joy and gratitude test." - Mabei C. Hardy, Delayan, III.

By WASHINGTON IRVING.

Dr. Knipperhausen was a native of the Palatinate of Germany, from whence in company with many of his country. men he had taken refuge in England on account of religious persecution. Ho was one of nearly 3,000 Palatines who came over from England in 1710 under the projection of Governor Hunter. Where the doctor had studied, how he he had acquired his medical knowledge, and where he had received his diploma. it is hard at present to say, for nobody knew at the time; yet it is certain that his profound skill and abstruse knowledge were the talk and wonder of the common people far and near.

His practice was totally different from that et any other physician, consisting in mysterious compounds known only to himself, in the preparing and administering of which, it was said, he always consulted the stars. So high an opinion was entertained of his skill, particularly by the German and Dutch inhabitants, that they always resorted to him in desperate cases. He was one of those infallible doctors that are always effecting sudden and surprising cures when the patient has been given up by all the regular physicians; unless, as is shrewdly observed, the case has been left too long before it was put into their hands. The doctor's library was the talk and marvel of the neighborhood, I might almost say of the entire burg. The good people looked with reverence at a man that had read three whole shelves full of books, and some of them, too, as large as a family Bible. There were many disputes among the members of the little Lutheran church as to which was the wiser man, the doctor or the dominie. Some of his admirers even went so far as to say that he knew more than the governor: himself-in a word, it was thought that there was no end to his knowledge!

No sooner was Dolph received into the doctor's family than he was put in possession of the lodging of his predecessor. It was a garret room of a steep roofed Dutch house, where the rain patted on the shingles and the lightning gleamed and the wind piped through the crannies in stormy weather, and where whole troop. of hungry rats, like Don Cossacks, galloped about in defiance of traps and ratsbane.

He was soon up to his ears in medical studies, being employed morning, noon and night in rolling pills, filtering timetures or pounding the pestle and mortar in one corner of the laboratory, while the doctor would take his seat in another corner when he had nothing else to do or expected visitors, and, arrayed in his morning gown and velvet cap, would pore over the contents of some folio volume. It is true that the regular thumping of Dolph's pestle, or, perhaps. the drowsy buzzing of the summer files. would now and then full the little man into a slumber; but then his spectacles were always wide awake and studiously regarding the book.

There was another personage in the house, however, to whom Dolph was obliged to pay allegiance. Though a bachelor, and a man of such great dignity and importance, yet the doctor was, like many other wise men, subject to petticoat government. He was completely under the sway of his housekeeper; a spare, busy, fretting housewife, in a little, round, quilted, Gorman cap, with a huge bunch of keys jingling at the girdle of an exceedingly long waist. Frau Ilse (or Frow Ilsy, as it was pronounced) had accompanied him in his various migrations from Germany to England, and from England to the province; managing his establishment and himself too; ruling him, it is true, with a gentle hand, but carrying a high hand with all the world beside. How she had acquired such ascendency I do not pretend to say. People, it is true, did talk; but have not people been prone to talk ever since the world began! Viho can tell how women generally contrive to get the upper hand? A hu band, it is true, may now and then be master in his own house; but wheever knew a bachelor that was not managed by his housekeeper?

Indeed, Frau Ilsv's power was not confined to the doctor's household. She was one of those prying gossips that know every one's business better than they do themselves; and whose all seeing eves, all telling tongues, are terrors throughout a neighborhood.

Nothing of any moment transpired in the world of scandal of this little burg, but it was known to Frau Hsv. She had her crew of cronies, that were perpetually hurrying to her little parlor with some precious bit of news; may, she would sometimes discuss a whole volume of secret history as the held the street door ajar and gossiped with one of these December blast. Between the doctor and the housekeeper it may easily be emplowed that Dolph had a busy life of it. As Frau Hay kept the keys, and literally ruled the roast, it was starvation to oil nd her, though he found the study of her temper more perplexing even than that of medicine. When not busy in the laboratory she kept him running hither and thigher on her errands; and on Sundays he was obliged to accompany her to and from church, and carry her Bible. Man; a time has the poor varlet stood shivering and blowing his fingers, or holding his frostbitten nose, in the church yard, while Ilsy and her cronies were huddled together, wagging their heads and tearing some unlucky character to pieces.

With all his advantages, however, Dolph made very slow progress in his art. This was no fault of the doctor's, certainly, for he took unwearied pains with the lad, keeping him close to the pestle and mortar, or on the trot about towa with phials and pill boxes; and if he ever flagged in his industry, which he was rather apt to do, the doctor would fly into a passion and ask him if he ever expected to learn his profession unless he applied himself closer to the study. The fact is, he still retained the fondness for sport and mischief that had marked his childhood; the habit, indeed, had strengthened with his years and gained force from being thwarted and constrained. He daily grew more and more untractable, and lost favor in the eyes both of the doctor and the housekeeper. In the meantime the doctor went on waxing wealthy and renowned. He was famous for his skill in managing cases' not laid down in the books. - He had cured several old women and young girls of witchcraft; a terrible complaint, pearly as prevalent in the province in those days as hydrophobia is at present. He had even restored one strapping country girl to perfect health who had gone so far as to vomit creeked pins and needles; which is complered a desperate stage of the malady. It was whispered, also, that he was possessed of the art of preparing love powders, and many applications had he in consequence from love rick patients of both sexes. But all these cases formed the mysterious part of his practice, in which, according to the cant phrase, "secreey and honor might be depended on." Dolph, therefore, was obliged to turn out of the study whenever such consultations occurred, though it is said he learned more of the secrets of the art at the keyhole than by all the rest of his standies put to-

As the doctor increased in wealth he began to entend his possessions and to son forward, like other great men, tothe time when he should retire to the reto bad purchased a farm, or, as the Dutch seitlers called it, a bowerie, a few miles from town. It had been the residence of a wealthy family, that had returned some time since to Holland. A large mansion house stood in the center of it, very much out of repair, and which. in consequence of certain reports, had received the appellation of the Haunted House. Either from these reports, or from its actual dreariness, the doctor had found it impossible to get a tenant; and, that the place might not fall to ruin before he could reside in it himself, he had placed a country boor, with his family, in one wing, with the privilege of cultivating the farm on shares.

The doctor now felt all the dignity of a landholder rising within him. He had a little of the German pride of territory in his composition, and almost looked upon himself as owner of a principality. He began to complain of the fatigue of business, and was fond of riding out "to est rates. throughout the neighborhood. His wall | ports. eyed horse stood, stamping and whisking off the flies, for a full hour before the house. Then the doctor's saddle bags would be brought out and adjusted; then, after a little while, his cloak would be rolled up and strapped to the saddle; then his umbrella would be buckled to the coat: while, in the meantime, a group of ragged boys, that clearyant class of beings, would gather before the door. At length the doctor would issue forth. in a pair of jack boots that reached above, his knees, and a cocked hat dapped down in front. As he was a short, fat man he took some time to mount into the saddle; and when there, he work some time to have the saddle and tirrups properly adjusted, enjoying the wonder and admiration of the media croud. Even atter he had set off, be vould parese in the middle of the sirect, or trot leck two or three times to give a med paraing orders. which were answered by the housekeeper from the door, or Delph from the study. or the black cook trent the cellur, or the chambermaid from the periot window; and there were generally some last words bawled after him just as he was turning the corner.

The whole neighborhead would be aroused by this pomp and eigenstance. the cobbler would deave his lest, the barber would thrust out his trazed head. with a comb sticking in it, a knot would collect at the grocer's door, and the word would be buzzed from one end of the street to the other. "The doctor's riding out to his country scat!"

These were golden moments for Dolph. No sooner was the do for out of sight than postle and morter vecre abandoned. the laboratory was left to take care of itself, and the Eudent was off on some madeap frolic.

Indeed, it must be confessed, the youngster, as he grew up, seemed in a thir way to fulfill the prediction of the old claret colored gentleman. He was the ringleader of all holiday sports and midnight gambols, ready for all kinds of mischievous prants and harebrained adventures. There is nothing so troubleseme as a hero on a small scale, or, rather, a hero days. in a small town. Polph soon became the abhorrence of all drowsy, housekeeping old citizens, who hated noise and had no relish for waggery. The good dames, too, considered him as little better than a reprobate, gathered their daughters under their wings whenever he approached, and pointed him out as a warning to their soil - No one seemed to hold him in much regard, executing the wild striplings of the place, who were captivated by his open hearted, daring manners, and the negree, who always look! upon ever, idle, de-nothing coun, ster as a kind of gentleman. Even the good Peter de Greodt, who had considered himself a kind of patron of the lad, began to despair of him and would shake his head dubiously as he listened to a long complaint from the housekeeper. and sipped a glass of her raspberry brandy. Still his mother was not to be wearied out of her affection by all the waywardness of her boy, nor disleartened by the stories of his middens which which her good friends were continually regaling her. She had, it is true, very little of garrulous cronies in the very teeth of a | the pleasure which rich people enjoy, in always hearing their chailren praised; but the considered all the fill will as a kind of persecution which he suffered. and she liked him the better on that necount. She saw him growing up a fine, tall, good looking youngster, and she looked at him with the a cret pride of a mother's heart. It was her great desire that Dolph should appear like a gentleman, and all the money the could save went towards helping out his pocket and his wardrobe. She would look out of the window after him as he sallied forth in his best array, and her heart would yearn with delight; and once, when Peter de Groodt, struck with the youngster's gallant appearance on a bright Sunday morning, observed, "Well, after all, Dolph does grow a comely fellow!" the tear of pride started into the mother's eye. "Ah, neighbor! neighbor!" exclaimed she, "they may say what they please; poor Dolph will yet hold up his-head with the best of them." Dolph Heyliger had now nearly attained his one-and-twentieth year, and the term of his medical studies was just expiring, yet it must be confessed that he knew little more of the profession than when he first entered the doctor's doors. This, however, could not be from want of quickness of parts, for he showed amazing aptness in mastering other branches of knowledge, which he could only have studied at intervals. He was, for instance, a sure marksman, and won all the geese and turkeys at Christmas holidays. He was a bold rider; he was famous for leaping and wrestling; he played tolerably on the fiddle; could swim like a fish; and was the best hand in the whole place at fives or nipepins.
