GUSSIE RITCHIE'S PRIZE.

Translation of the Chinese Version of Her Marriage to Beauty Bock. The telegraph the other morning brought the news of the marriage, in San Francisco, to a Chinese actor of a Miss Gussie Ritchie, of Oregon, a chorus girl in an opera company.

The following account of the affair is from a Chinese publication of San Francisco, and was translated for Portland, who writes his native tongue, it will not be unkind to hope, more accurately than he does English.

Miss Gussie Ritchie she was actor very good looking young lady her age Only Eighteen years old and one day she went to china theater with her friends. The name of that Theater Dan San Fung on Jackson sts. When she was there saving Beauty Bock playing for female party Miss Gussie Ritchie was very anxious like to married Beauty Bock at once.

Miss Gussie Ritchie felt very happy for acceptance. She gave Beauty Bock one of nice & beautiful gold watch value Several hundred dollars. Also she willing to turn all over her prosperity the which owning in the Oregon to Beauty Bock, and he felt great delight those which she promised to turn over to him. That is on the 22 day of December, so the both went to court that day to ask Judge for marriage and Judge said refuse to omit their marriage because this would make our state feeling disgrace.

They Disturbed His Slumbers.

Jack—Say, Gus, will you please leave your trousers out in the hall to-night? Gus—Good Heavens! Jack, what do you want me to do that for?

She Was a Little Slow at First. "Darling Bessie," said Mr. Hoover to his lady typewriter, "will you marry me? Since you have come like a gleam of sunshine to gladden my existence I have lived in the radiant light of your ethereal presence and passionately—"

"Please speak a little slower, Mr. Hoover," said the fair typewriter interrupting him, while her fingers continued to fly over the keys of her machine.

"A proposal!" shrieked Miss Caramel. "Why so it is. I didn't notice. I thought you were dictating. Forgive me, dear William. I am yours. And now, since I have made this foolish blunder, please sign this paper and I will keep it as a memento."

Husbands and Husbands. Anxious Mother—What? Only a month married and unhappy! Married Daughter—How could I be otherwise? My husband does not love me. No matter how much I pretend to flirt with my old beaux he doesn't mind it a bit.

A Painful Thought. A fashionable boarding school in New York teaches its pupils how to eat asparagus. It is a painful thought that there are thousands of girls—nice girls, too—who are compelled to go through the world, from the cradle to the grave, without receiving a single lesson in the art of eating asparagus.—Norristown Herald.

A Weary Evening. Jinks (to old friend in theatre lobby)—I notice you come out after every act. You are not drinking, I hope? Blinks—Oh, no; but it is rather tiresome inside. I came with my own sister this time.—New York Weekly.

BILLIGER'S BLUNDER.

Painful Episode in the History of the McSwat Family. "Billiger, the room is growing cold." Absorbed in his task of reading a story by the celebrated novelist Wovells, in order to win a bet of $50 he had made with Swackhammer that he could do it in two consecutive sittings and come out alive, Mr. McSwat paid no attention to the remark.

"Billiger," repeated Mrs. McSwat presently, "the room is growing cold." "I had not observed it, Lobelia," he replied, as he hastily sketched a large fist on the margin of the page to enable him to find the place again, and looked up. "Is it any colder than it has been all afternoon?"

"Of course it is," retorted his wife. "You don't feel it because you put on your overcoat when you began to read that story."

"What do you want me to do?" he inquired. "You know as well as I do. The furnace needs more coal."

Billiger laid aside his book, rose to his feet and yawned—a large, frank, unreserved and expansive yawn.

"I'll attend to it, Lobelia," he said, and went down into the basement. "By George, I'll make it warm enough for her!" he muttered, as he threw shovelful after shovelful of coal into the furnace.

"It doesn't seem to blaze up just exactly as it ought," he said. "I'll stir it up a little."

He opened the furnace door. There was a sudden bursting into flame, a fierce puff, a blinding glare enveloped him, and with a yell of terror he darted up the stairway.

"Billiger McSwat!" exclaimed his wife, as he came tearing into the sitting room, "what in the world have you been doing to yourself?"

Billiger stepped in front of a mirror and looked long and sorrowfully at the reflection that met his gaze.

His eyebrows and eyelashes were gone, his front hair was shriveled, his mustache had disappeared, and a sorry looking crisp on each side of his face was all that remained of a once glorious pair of side whiskers.

"What in the world have you been doing to yourself?" repeated his anxious wife. "Lobelia," he replied, in the voice of a man who has waded through the quicksand of doubt and uncertainty, but has reached the solid ground of truth at last, "I have been making an infernal idiot of myself!"

"It will all grow out again, Billiger," said Mrs. McSwat, soothingly, some hours later; and she leaned over the lounge on which he lay, and with her soft hand she dabbed his scorched face with vaseline and cold cream.

"Lobelia," he groaned, as he surveyed himself mournfully in a hand glass, "I'm a ruin—a hideous ruin. If you had known what a ghastly spectacle a puff of flame would make of me, Lobelia," he continued, in a faltering voice, "would you have married me?"

"Billiger," she replied, as she put a fresh dab of salve on his face, "I would. You need somebody to take care of you."—Chicago Tribune.

A Case of Mist.

"No, Mr. Sampson," she says sweetly, "I can never be your wife. We would not be happy. You are too extravagant in your habits."

"Extravagant!" he repeated. "You have been misinformed, Miss Lulu. I am as economical as a Brooklyn deacon. Why, I have to be."

"Then I can never be your wife, Mr. Sampson." "Because I'm economical?" "No, because you have to be economical!"—Once a Week.

He Got the Money First. Jones (to Brown, who had just dropped in to borrow a fiver)—Well, I'll do it this time, but I wonder you are not ashamed to be always in debt. Look at me; I don't owe a penny.

Brown—Dare say not, old man. You haven't a borrowing face. Nobody would trust you.—Pick Me Up.

A Greater Favor. Fatherleigh—My boy, you acted nobly during the fire. Let me tell you that you deserve a great deal of credit. Lytepurse—Thanks, awfully! Would you mind repeating that sentiment to—aw—to my tailor?—Pittsburg Bulletin.

A Natural Question. "Miss Emma, I love you. Will you not make me forever happy by sharing my humble lot with me?" "Is there a nice little house on the lot, George?"—Harper's Bazar.

What Is It? Dude—You have been looking straight at me for the last five minutes. What is it? Farmer—That's just what I was wondering.—Judge.

THE TEA TABLE.

The use of a single bottle of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer will show its efficacy in restoring the natural color of the hair and cleansing the scalp. It is that John McCullough may erect another fine block suitable for shops. Nine or ten good shops are greatly needed in Deseronto.

Let quality, not quantity, be the test of a medicine. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the concentrated extract of the best and purest ingredients. Medical men everywhere recommend it as the surest and most economical blood medicine in the market.

George Gillies, Ganoquoque, is adding to his already extensive establishment, the manufacture of tubular steel bow sockets for carriage tops. The machinery is now in the factory being set up.

The great majority of so-called cough cures do little more than impair the digestive functions and create bile. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the contrary, while it cures the cough, does not interfere with the functions of either stomach or liver.

A meeting of the friends of temperance was held in the Bath town hall on Tuesday. The repeal will be resisted strenuously. Officers for the Bath Association were appointed as follows: President, Dr. Kennedy; vice-president, Rev. H. I. Allen; secretary, E. Newton Jory; treasurer, Miss Hawley.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

Robert Louis Stevenson on his return to New York will fit up a suite of apartments and settle down there for an indefinite period. He has come to the conclusion that New York offers better material for a literary man than any other great city in the world.

At the end of every alley in London stands the ghost of Dickens, and the shadow of Balzac falls across the pavements of Paris. Stevenson finds no literary spooks in the thoroughfares of New York, and he aspires to the position of the novelist par excellence of the American metropolis.

Go at Once to the Root Of the evil; doing by halves makes waste half the energy expended by mankind. Why should you trifle with disease? When indications are given that something has gone wrong make the restoration of normal conditions the real, not incidental, business of life.

Few curative agents have equalled Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, compounded of purely vegetable substances, on scientific principles, and beautifully sugar-coated. They constitute the most certain, safe and pleasant family medicine in existence. Try Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, and by all dealers in medicine.

Why? Why suffer a single moment, when you can get immediate relief from internal or external pain by the use of Polson's Nerviline, the great pain cure? Nerviline has never been known to fail. Try a 10 cent sample bottle. You will find it just as recommended. Neuralgia, toothache, cramps, headache, and all similar complaints disappear as if by magic when Nerviline is used. Large bottles 25 cents. Test bottles 10 cents, at druggists and country dealers.

Alfred Daniel, of Douglas county, Ga., boasts that he never was in bed at sunrise, was never sick a day in his life, never lost a tooth, has never uttered an oath, and is the father of 26 children, 15 of whom are now living.
