PROTESTANT NUNS.

Lutheran and Episcopalian, Methodist and Presbyterian Sisterhoods.

A Protestant Sisterhood is a nineteenth century development such as the reformers of three centuries ago could never have thought possible.

In 1833 a young German pastor, Theodore Fiedner, undertook the work of reviving the medieval order of deaconesses, of which Phebe, of Cenchrea, was the prototype, and induced a young German girl, Gertrude Reichard, to become the first modern deaconess.

There are forty German deaconesses prosecuting their labour of love in America, nearly all in Philadelphia at the Mary J. Drexel Home.

The Episcopal sisterhoods started in England about 1848, were direct imitations of the Lutheran orders, yet differ from them in several important particulars.

Another distinction is in the fact that the Lutheran sisters are all members of one order, while there are sixteen orders of Episcopal nuns in this country, and many others in England that have no branches here.

The Methodist movement had its inception in Chicago in 1887. Eight women were consecrated as deaconesses, and in three months they made 2,751 religious visits.

The Presbyterians, too, have become interested in the movement, and Calvinistic deaconesses will soon be at work helping to rob the world of its pain and sin.

BILL NYE IN CHICAGO.

A Talk With the Great Hog Killer—Mr. Armour Likes His Work.

Two million three hundred and eighty-two thousand cows were made widows here last year. Five thousand pigs per day also bit the dust, after having emitted a piercing shriek.

"And are you fond of your work, Mr. Armour?" I asked, as he began to pull out the chin whiskers of an adult hog.

He then buried his steaming blade in the watch pocket of a large ecer hog, and as he began to unravel the digestive economy of the poor brute, I turned aside and hid my face on the shoulder of a young lady who stood near by.

I speak of Mr. Armour's work because it is customary to do so. People who come to Chicago from the east at once repair to the pork centres and, having seen them, they write a letter about the matter and go home.

Much will necessarily depend upon the care exercised in the selection of food, which is all important to the dyspeptic. Hamilton's Pills may be used with the greatest benefit in cases where liver and bowel complications are produced by or are a result of dyspepsia.
