All Travelers

Whether by land or sea, who are liable to be out of reach of drug stores and doctors, would do well to have a supply of Ayer's Pills at hand. For this purpose, the Pills are put up in bottles as well as boxes, and may be conveniently carried in one's pocket. Six of the most distinguished physicians of Syracuse, N. Y., in giving their joint testimony as to the excellent medical combination of Ayer's Pills, make this point: "Their beautiful coating of gelatine and sugar is a great advantage, in that it protects them from change by time or climate, and renders them pleasant and even agreeable to take."

THEIR RECORDS TOLD.

FOUR OF UNCLE SAM'S NEWLY SELECTED MINISTERS.

Allen Thorndike Rice, Patrick Egan, W. W. Thomas, George B. Loring and John Hicks—Where They Were Born and Where They Were Taught.

Mr. Allen Thorndike Rice, who has been made United States minister to Russia, is quite a young man for so important a mission. He was born in Boston in 1853. It is said of his ancestors on the maternal side that the first of the Thorndike family in this country came over at the same time with Governor Winthrop, and that one of his English ancestors, a bishop, was banished and driven to the Cape Colonies for a spirit of toleration which was regarded as heresy. He was subsequently pardoned, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. Two of Mr. Rice's American ancestors took an active part, as officers, in the revolutionary war. His father was a successful merchant in New York, and acquired a considerable property. The Thorndikes were also noted Boston merchants, Mr. Rice's great-grandfather being one of the great shipping merchants of his day. Although the Thorndikes were originally a Massachusetts family, his mother, Miss Thorndike, belonged to Maryland.

When Mr. Rice was 9 years of age he was taken abroad and remained in Europe five years, returning to America in 1867. In 1871 he went to England, and was graduated at Oxford in 1875. He afterwards studied law at the Columbia Law school, in New York. He is known rather as a literary man than a politician, having early showed a taste for literary pursuits by contributions to the New York press and to periodical literature. In 1876 he purchased the North American Review for $3,000. He was then only 23 years old, but assumed the editorship himself. It was then a quarterly. It had so run down that it was no longer a profitable property. The last editor before Mr. Rice was Henry Adams, and his predecessor was James Russell Lowell. Mr. Rice took the periodical to New York, made it first bi-monthly and in the following year a monthly. Under the management of Lowell and Adams it appears that its circulation had reached so low a point that its demise was only a question of a few months. In less than two years Mr. Rice re-established it as a conspicuous and influential organ of public opinion and, it is understood, made it a most profitable property. Mr. Rice first inaugurated the system in it of selecting the leading representatives of great interests, and experts, to state their views on both sides of every great question, irrespective of creed or party. In 1884 he bought a controlling interest in "Le Matin," one of the principal papers in Paris, which he still holds, and is still editor of The Review.

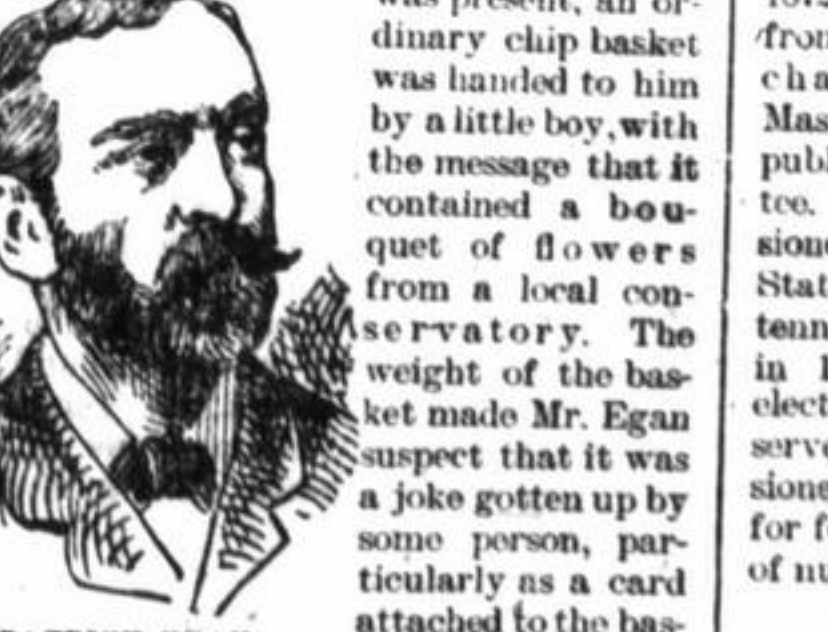

Mr. Rice has visited Europe several times, where he has a very large acquaintance among distinguished people. In England he enjoyed the society of Gladstone, the late John Bright, and the leaders of the Irish Parliamentary party. Mr. Rice happened to be in Paris at the time of the French revolution of 1870, and was one of the eighteen—although only a spectator—who entered the Hotel de Ville with Gambetta and heard the republic proclaimed to the surging crowd below. Mr. Rice also devoted nearly two years of his life to organizing and directing the expedition for the exploration of the ruins of Central America, which went out under the joint auspices of the United States and French governments. This enterprise was successful and gave to each nation a valuable museum. In 1886 he ran for congress on the Republican ticket, but was defeated. He pursued those who were instrumental in his defeat and secured their expulsion from the local organization. His action resulted in his recommending the Australian system of voting. He also succeeded in getting a plank for ballot reform into the platforms of the Republican and United Labor parties in 1887. His literary work consists in having edited "Reminiscences of Abraham Lincoln" and contributed to "Ancient Cities of the New World."

Patrick Egan, who is to represent the United States in Chili, was born at Shrule, near Ballyhanin, Ireland, in 1841. When he reached man's estate he became a corn merchant in Dublin. Taking an interest in Irish politics he joined the Home Rule league and became one of its council. He was also one of the founders of the land league and was at one time its treasurer. In 1880 he was indicted with other prominent leaders for conspiring to incite the Irish tenantry to illegal acts, was tried and the jury disagreed. After the Phoenix park murders in 1882 he came to America and settled in Lincoln, Neb., where he entered the grain business. The next year he was elected president of the Irish National league.

In 1885 an attempt was made to assassinate him. On the occasion of the Irish national ball given in Lincoln, at which Mr. Egan was present, an ordinary chip basket was handed to him by a little boy, with the message that it contained a bouquet of flowers from a local conservatory. The weight of the basket made Mr. Egan suspect that it was a joke gotten up by some person, particularly as a card attached to the basket bore the legend: "To the president of the Irish league—From a friend of Ireland and liberty." He had it sent quietly to the cloak room, and when the event had passed out of the recollection of those about him he sent his son Francis to examine it. The young man proceeded to the cloak room, where he found the man in charge pale with anxiety, and who said he was just about to pitch the basket out of the window.

During the intervals of silence he heard the monotonous ticking inside the basket, and he became considerably excited. Francis took the paper from the basket and found inside a long tin box. Raising the lid the alarm started, and he had just time enough to place his finger over the cartridge of a pistol inside when the hammer descended on his digit. He then dismembered the apparatus and placed it away carefully, reporting to his father that it was only a pistol fixed with clockwork, the barrel buried in sawdust saturated with oil. The young man did not know what sawdust saturated with oil might mean, and to him it appeared harmless enough. Knowledge of the whole matter was confined to about four persons, and the festivities proceeded without interruption to the close.

Mr. Egan is a small man with yellowish gray hair, a broad forehead, large head, blue eyes and smiling lips. In conversation he impresses one as having intellectual and cultured intelligence.

This is the second time that Mr. William Widgery Thomas, Jr., has been appointed United States Minister to Sweden and Norway. He was born in Portland, Me., in 1839, and is a graduate of Bowdoin college, class of 1860. Tom Reed was one of his classmates. After Mr. Thomas left college he began studying law, but he was not admitted to the bar until later. President Lincoln sent him abroad, and he was in turn vice consul at Constantinople, consul at Galatz, Moldavia and consul at Gothenburg, Sweden. He did so well in his foreign missions that Secretary Seward conveyed to him the thanks of the state department. He learned the Swedish language while in Gothenburg and translated "The Lost Athenian," by Victor Rydberg, into English.

When he returned to the United States he was admitted to the bar and began practicing law. But he became interested in Swedish immigration, and in 1870 he went over to Sweden and brought back a colony of fifty persons. A settlement was founded in Maine called New Sweden. It has grown now to 2,000, and is the most successful colony founded since the revolution. Mr. Thomas has been a member of the Maine house of representatives and for two sessions was speaker. In 1881 President Arthur appointed him minister to Sweden and Norway. In his official speech to the king of Sweden he spoke in the Swedish language, which tickled the king and his subjects greatly. In fact, Mr. Thomas made himself popular with the Swedish people, and they will be glad no doubt to see him back again at his old post.

When the Swedes in the United States held their grand celebration in Minneapolis, last September, Mr. Thomas was selected as the orator. This shows that the Swedish people on this side of the water like him too.

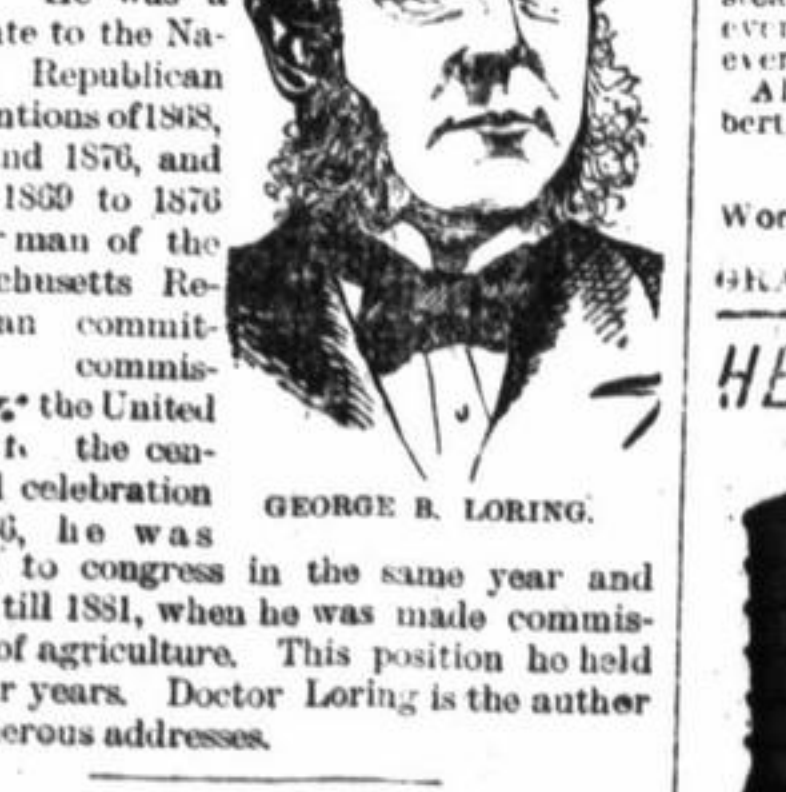

When Mr. Thomas was over in Sweden he fell in love with one of the ladies of the Swedish court, and what is more to the point, he married her. So the Swedish people will have a double reason for heartily welcoming the new United States minister to their country. Col. John Hicks, the new minister to Peru, was born at Auburn, N. Y., April 12, 1847, but removed with his parents to Wisconsin in 1851. He grew up in that newly started region at a time when schools and facilities for reading were scarce, but he early developed a taste for study and at the age of 15 had acquired sufficient learning to teach successfully a country school. By the death of his father, who was killed in South Carolina as a member of the Thirty-second Wisconsin during the civil war, young Hicks was left entirely on his own resources, and by sawing wood and teaching school he obtained a college education at Lawrence university, Appleton, Wis. In 1867 he began work as a reporter on The Oshkosh Northwestern; in 1870 he became one of the proprietors and soon after purchased the interest of his partner, Gen. T. S. Allen. His paper is the most important in Wisconsin, outside of Milwaukee, and in the last campaign Col. Hicks was president of the local Harrison and Morton club, and did active service in the campaign by stump speeches and through his paper. Col. Hicks is president of the Wisconsin Press association and vice president of the National Editorial association, and his appointment gives general satisfaction to the newspaper men of his state. He has never held office, but is a man of affairs and stands high in his state. At the time of the visit of the National Editorial association to the city of Mexico, in 1888, Col. Hicks, on behalf of the visitors, delivered an address to President Diaz which was highly spoken of.

JOHN HICKS.

Dr. George B. Loring, who has been made United States minister and consul general of the United States to Portugal, was born at North Andover, Mass., in 1817. He was graduated with the class of '38 at Harvard and studied medicine. From 1843 to 1850 he served as surgeon in charge of the Marine hospital at Chelsea, Mass., and was one of the commissioners to revise the United States Marine hospital system in 1849. From 1853 to 1857 he was postmaster at Salem. Since 1864 he has been president of the New England Agricultural society. He was a delegate to the National Republican conventions of 1868, 1872 and 1876, and from 1869 to 1876 chairman of the Massachusetts Republican committee. The United States in the centennial celebration in 1876, he was elected to congress in the same year and served till 1881, when he was made commissioner of agriculture. This position he held for four years. Doctor Loring is the author of numerous addresses.

T. E. Byrnes, who has been appointed chief of the appointment division of the treasury department, is 34 years of age, and was born in Bellows Falls, Vt. At the age of 7 years his parents removed to Minnesota and settled at Litchfield. He passed several years there, living on a farm and attending a country school. He entered the State University of Minnesota and graduated therefrom in 1873. He studied law in the Columbia Law school of New York city, and has been enjoying an active practice. He has been a member of the Union league for six years and has acted as its vice president several terms, and was offered its presidency, but declined. He was elected president of the Republican League of Minnesota in February, 1887, at the formation, and has held that position since. He has never been a candidate for, and has never yet held, a public office.
