That Seized Railway Released—Interesting Insurance Statistics.

OTTAWA, April 14.—Judge Downes of Calais, Me., and Mr. John D. Chipman of St. Stephen, N. B., waited on the Minister of Customs on Saturday in relation to the seizure by Customs officers a few months ago of 4 1/2 miles of the Calais and Penobscot Railway, a road running along the international boundary. The seizure was made on the ground that material used in the refitting of the road had been unlawfully imported without entry at the Customs. It was shown to the satisfaction of the minister that the duty on all the material so imported for the past ten years would not exceed $30, and that with respect to this the strict letter of the law had unwittingly been departed from owing to the peculiar situation of the road. The minister coming to the conclusion that in a case of this sort a departure from the strict letter of the law was not inexcusable, decided to have the seized strip of road released and the delegation left well satisfied with the result of their interview.

With Increased Knowledge

Of the laws governing health and the treatment of disease, resort to the physicians is less often made than formerly. Successful treatment can be made in such minor ailments as headache, biliousness, constipation, fluttering at the heart when sympathetic, foul breath, etc., all the various disorders resulting from deranged action of the liver and stomach, by the use of Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. These pills being entirely composed of vegetable extracts, they form an admirable substitute for the numerous tonic bitters in the market. Hamilton's Pills are mild in action, certain in results, safe in all kinds of weather, and form the best family medicine extant. Sold by all dealers in medicine, and by N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston.

David Crammond, Wolfe Island, who died March 29th, was a man of sterling integrity, of uprightness of character and of moral and religious principles. The map will be exhibited in the Texas Spring Palace to be built at Fort Worth.

The Book Agent's Trick.

The business of a book agent, though the butt for stinging sarcasm, requires as much knowledge of human nature and as much diplomacy as many occupations of more dignity and prestige. For instance, I stepped into the business office of a very prominent citizen the other day to introduce a set of a well known classic author. The old gentleman was very crusty and sour and snapped me off in quite an indignant manner, with the remark that "he didn't want any pesterous book agent to bother him." "Here, my good friend," I said, "I don't want to sell you these books; I am paid a salary to show them merely and advertise the company. I am a Frenchman and the company has employed twenty-five of us at a good salary per week to show these books, not sell them. The publishing company spend over $300 per week this way, instead of spending it by ads in the newspapers." The old gentleman bit and soon became interested in the books. "Can you get me a set now?" he inquired. I replied that I had only one set in my trunk at the hotel, but I would sell it to him for cash. He bought the set, and that story, trick, prevarication or whatever you may call it accomplished the sale. There's nothing like "sizing up" people.—One of Them in Globe-Democrat.

A Magnate's Pleasures.

It must be pleasant to be a railroad magnate without a conscience. Such an one, we are told, tried to make the run from New York to Boston in five and a half hours, that he might attend a club dinner in the latter city. All the regular express and accommodation trains on the road were held back to give the right of way to the "special," and two men who did not move quickly enough were run down by the latter and killed on the instant. These fatalities were rather sad, of course, but the worst of it is that the railroad official did not make his time by thirty minutes. As he sat comfortably down to dinner one can fancy him worrying over the lost half hour, and perhaps thinking wrathfully about the two men that got in the way of his train, thus making it lose a minute or two! Of course it must be pleasant to be a conscienceless railroad magnate, but there are crumpled rose leaves in his bed, too.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The Allurements of Office.

It has been said to be a serious question whether a man who leaves a good business—or even one which has any decent promise of becoming good—to enter the public service in nation, state or city is to be envied. To our mind there is no question at all about it. There is the seduction, sometimes, of a considerable salary attending such an appointment, but it is the snare of the fowler. It implies in the end a dependence upon money which is not earned under conditions that insure its permanency, and the entrance on a kind of life dangerous to systematic and industrious habits. Young men especially ought to be warned against it as a danger than which few are to be more avoided.—Boston Herald.
