

ODDFELLOWS' CONCERT.

A JOYOUS ENTERTAINMENT IN THE OPERA-HOUSE.

A Toronto Visitor Who Was Very Entertained—His Songs and Recitations Were Fine—The Local Talent Reservedly Appreciated—Funds for the Hospital.

Last evening the Oddfellows celebrated the anniversary of the foundation of the order in America by a concert in the opera house. The excellent programme was listened to by a large audience.

Mr. H. H. Brown, on behalf of the order, welcomed the people to the concert. He explained that the Oddfellows had decided upon devoting the proceeds to charitable purposes, and in this way they would give a practical illustration of the benevolent objects of the order.

There was a pleasant informality about the entertainment that added to the enjoyment of those present. The programme had been carefully arranged and was finely given throughout.

The first item, a piano duet, "Qui Vive," by Miss Munro and A. Smyth, was given in artistic style. The players displayed to a marked extent their musical proficiency.

In the "Hours of Softened Splendor," a quartette by Miss Greenwood and Orser, and Messrs. Medley and Greenwood, was rendered in a careful manner and was well received.

Miss Maud Waggner, possessing a voice of great compass and sweetness, became a favorite after her presentation of "Melody Divine." Her rendition of "Marguerite" was also much admired.

In W. E. Ramsay, of Toronto, the chief interest was centred. He is a chipper youth. In his comic selections he was perfectly at ease, and recited them in a finished style.

Prof. W. Osler, Philadelphia, thinks the outlook for the Kingston and Toronto women's schools of medicine is not altogether bright. He thinks it would be generous for Montreal educationists to aid one or the other of schools, which more than fulfil the present demand, than start another.

Dr. Duff, Newburgh, resigned the office of Master Workman of the lodge of A. O. U. W. at Camden East to accept the same office in the new lodge at Newburgh. The office at Camden East was filled by the promotion of Mr. Guy to the position and Peter Johnstone was elected overseer.

He Cannot Get Exemption. Mr. Carrington can settle down to the conviction that the city council will not grant him exemption for either five or ten years. There are at present twenty-one members of the council in the city—Ald. Polson being away—and to give force to the exemption fifteen votes will have to be cast in his favor. This is impossible. Six voted against the measure on Thursday night, and one at least, of those absent has declared himself against granting the exemption. The vote, to carry, will consequently be one short.

GENERAL DANIEL BUTTERFIELD. Daniel Butterfield was born in Oneida county, N. Y., Oct. 31st, 1831. He graduated at Union college in 1849 and became a merchant in New York. The gallant soldier was colonel of a militia regiment when the war broke out. He drilled and organized the 4th Cavalry, Washington. Returning to New York he assumed command of his regiment, took it to Washington, and led the advance of the Union forces across the Long bridge. He subsequently commanded in the McClellan peninsula campaign, and fought with distinguished courage at the battles of Gaines Mill and Malvern Hill. Butterfield captured the first gun in Sherman's Atlanta campaign at Resaca, in the charge of Hood's line led by Benjamin Harrison, then colonel of the seventh Indiana, now president of the United States. He fought at the second Bull Run and at Fredericksburg. His subsequent services at the battles of Wachton, Lookout Mountain, Chattanooga, Mission Ridge and in the Atlanta campaign were brilliant. He fought in twenty-eight battles, was twice wounded and three times brevetted a major general, and held the rank of major general in the volunteer force. In 1869 General Butterfield resigned his commission as colonel in the regular army. He was appointed assistant-treasurer of the United States at New York.
