FUTURE BOODLE EXILES.

While all honest persons rejoice in the passage of Professor Weldon's extradition bill by the Canadian parliament the satisfaction is alloyed with regret at the bill's not being retroactive. Its weight falls on future delinquents, not on the fraudulent boodlers who are at present in Canada, defying the United States and living at ease. Nevertheless we must be content with the best we can get. Since we cannot catch and punish the criminals who have thus gone into exile, we can only feel grateful that Canada can no longer be an asylum to the thieves and robbers who will be sure to arise as the months and years roll by. These gentlemen must make new devices. This is a solid satisfaction, and we ought to feel obliged to Professor Weldon.—New York Journal.

It is a pity that the act is not retroactive, and so made to rid the country of a lot of men who, by their infamous records, are calculated to leave the worst impressions on Canadian society. It is a scandal that the government of the United States has not been disposed to treat for the enlargement of the extradition treaty, that the fear of disfavor from any class delays or prevents the action which justice demands. But it is no excuse for our government, which took the Weldon bill under its care and modified it, to say that it must proceed cautiously because of the attitude of another controlling power. The extradition treaty had very little to do with the Weldon bill. It was necessitated by the very inefficiency of the extradition treaty, and it should have been as sweeping as possible in its provisions. The Americans, we are told, will be grateful that their criminals cannot henceforth find an asylum in Canada, but their gratitude cannot be compared with ours. We don't want the toughs of America to settle in our populous centres even though they presume to lead in fashion and find an entry into aristocratic society à la John C. Eno.

NATIONAL MOVEMENT.

The Americans have a national movement, but it is not such as is known by the name in Canada. The new theory, we are informed, contemplates the employment of all persons by the state. Each individual, no matter what his special talent or ability, would be entitled only to an equal share in the entire product of the country. The only advantage of a high grade of mental ability would be that its possessor would be able to pass some one of the numerous boards of civil service examiners, and secure some comparatively easy employment. Even that possibility would disappear as soon as machinery attained a perfection which would render even more than a few hours of labour per day unnecessary for any one. There would be no money. Food and clothing would be procured upon a certificate from the state that the bearer was a citizen. There could be no rich men, and poverty would be impossible. Every man, from the president to a boot-black, would be a government official. It is not proposed to accomplish all this immediately. But already the business of carrying letters and papers is monopolized by the government. Another step in that direction and the telegraph system will be removed from the domain of private enterprise. That accomplished, telephone, express and railroad companies might follow the same path. The subject has been discussed by some of the brightest intellects of the day, including Edward Everett Hall, T. W. Higginson, Miss Frances Willard, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, and Rabbi Solomon Schindler. Some of these see in the new movement the disappearance of all those class distinctions which serve to produce public discontent. They have given a great deal of thought to the best methods of making labour more remunerative, of providing employment for every one, of distributing more evenly the comforts of life, of guarding against the monopolies which make the few rich at the expense of the many. But in holding up the powers and privileges of the people would the enterprise, that has been so characteristic of this century, not be checked? Would the men of energy and ambition be tempted to cease their strife when they would be without the hope of reward? Would they concentrate their forces in the development of great schemes and not derive from the same a greater benefit than that of a unit on the community? Would the division of the spoils make the lazy men industrious and the criminals of the country honest men? Would socialism and anarchism and all the other disturbing elements disappear, and a perfect peace prevail? Yes, in theory the millennium will be reached when nationalism has been adopted, when every one will be on the same footing socially and financially, and realize at last the force of the argument that the world owes him a living! The idea is inspiring and some beautiful things have been written in its behalf by the thinkers of America. The symposium in which they indulge, are however, for the present just so many day dreams. The suggested divisions of labour and reward are not possible. They are urged in view of the tyrannies of the monopolists, but is there any hope of relief from them? Not while the monopolists practically own the government, and dictate the legislation of the country. The world has passed the point when a "national" movement can have any effect.

NEWS FROM ARIZONA.

The Editor Gives His Opinions Very Pointedly—Convincing Advertisers. Arizona Kicker.

The absence of our society column for the last three issues seems to call for an explanation. The trouble was jealousy among the bon ton. If we happened to make a five-line announcement that Mrs. Col. Dash expected her brother-in-law direct from the California penitentiary on a certain date, and only a four-line item to the effect that Mrs. Judge De Soto imported her bustle direct from Zanzibar, there was an ill feeling which stirred up the entire community. With no disposition to claim this as the only growing town in Arizona, and with no desire to kill the growth of rival towns, we humbly call attention to the fact that since January last fourteen new saloons, three poker rooms and four retail tobacco stores have been opened in the place, and at the present moment eighteen men are engaged in building a gaol capable of accommodating thirty prisoners. We have done all this without any brag or bluster, and we propose to keep right on in the same quiet fashion, leaving the outside world to judge for itself as to where it shall seek new homes and invest its capital.

The dyspeptic old exorcism who claims to edit the milk and mush publication down at the corner of Cathay alley is jealous of our advertising patronage. In a labored article this week in his poorly printed old apology he says that we practice bull-dozing to bring advertising. What a liar! The Kicker practice bull-dozing! The idea is laughable, and if he was worth minding we should walk down to his shanty and choke the assertion down his brazen throat.

There used to be several firms here which didn't believe in advertising. We couldn't make 'em believe in it until we went at it and found out that they were composed of gentlemen who had skipped from the east for barn-burning, horse-stealing, bigamy, embezzlement, etc. Then we wrestled with 'em and they came to see that the life of trade was in using printers' ink. We simply convinced—not bull-dozed. The efforts of our knock-kneed contemporary to smirch the fair fame of the Kicker will simply call forth smiles of pity.

Clipped From the Papers—The Spice That Makes Up Life.

Speaking of bookbinding, dictionaries ought to be spellbound. Strange as it may appear, a blunt man's remarks are seldom without point. "One fire is as bad as three removes," said the man whom the sheriff threw out because he did not pay his rent. A machine has been invented which will fling a man 15,000 feet into the air. Every newspaper office should have one.

Persons desiring to see the "fasting girls" should not visit the dime museums between one and two o'clock, as they go to lunch during that interval.

"Oh, yes, I'm fond of a good breeze, but when my son asks me every morning for a five dollar bill, that is exactly the kind of a bracing heir I don't like."

Travis—Does Miss Popinjay's father wear felt shoes? De Smith (with a pained expression)—I should say he did!

Doctor—Madame, your husband's disease, I regret to say, is cataract of the eye. Wife—Impossible! He never drank water enough for that.

"Do you find any change in ladies' pockets this season?" "Good gracious, I can't even find the pockets, let alone the change in them!"

Mrs. Youngthyng (meaning the evening meal)—George, what shall I get for tea? Youngthyng (affecting to misunderstand)—Green and black mixed, as usual, Fanny.

Important to Teachers.

The following memorandum has been issued respecting collegiate institute specialists and first grade A, B, and C, certificates: Hereafter no specialist's certificate or first class certificate of any grade will be granted unless the following conditions be fulfilled:

(1) The examination shall be the regular university examinations. No special or supplemental examinations will be accepted.

(2) Each applicant shall submit to the education department, with his application, a copy of the time table of each examination and of the examination papers on which he wrote, both being certified by the registrar of the university. A confidential statement from the registrar of the university of the marks obtained by the applicant on each paper, and of such other marks as may have been awarded him at each oral or practical examination, will also be required. In the case of candidates for first-class grade C the answer papers will also be transmitted by the registrar to the department.

A Song of Spring. Achoo! Achoo! I've such a cold That I can scarcely sigh; I felt just like a three-year-old Ugh! this beauty's right. Add dose by dose is red and sore. By lead is aching, too. By eyes with tear are bribbigg o'er Achoo! I say, achoo!

It doesn't seem to bother much How badly I lay feel. By freeds all laugh at be as such A twist of fortune's wheel. By leads feels like ad eby shell. Filled up with gloob and glue; Just why I really caddot tell— Achoo! I say, achoo!

THIS IS HORRIBLE.

A Father Unintentionally Buries His Daughter Alive.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., April 29.—About the middle of March Emma Rath caught a cold, and on the 22nd apparently died. The body was left about four hours. When Mrs. Frances Seahler and another neighbour dressed it for burial they were surprised to find that the body was warm. The body was buried in Geddes cemetery. Rath dug the grave. After the funeral the fact of the girl's body being warm, several hours after her breathing, was talked over. The possibility of her being buried alive preyed upon her father's mind so, that he uncovered the grave last Monday. No sooner was the glass uncovered than he was horrified to see Emma's body lying turned over on one side. Her hands were clasped over her face and her hair was tangled up over her eyes, as though it had been torn in dreadful agony. There were finger marks on her face. Nearly paralyzed with terror, he hastily replaced the cover, shoveled the dirt back into the grave and ran from the place.
