THE HOME OF THE ONION.

A BALMY BREEZE FROM THE BERMUJA ISLANDS.

The Culture of the Bulbs—A Place of Boarding Houses—The Shops a Revelation to the Visitors—An Interrupted Story—Forced to Buy a Pulpit.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, April 28.—The onion is the apple of a Bermudian's eye. This may seem paradoxical, but it is true. The prosperity of the islands depends on the price of the tearful bulb, and as New Yorkers just at present seem disinclined to pay more than "three and six" for delivery at the wharf in this city, there is much weeping. Last year at this season onions brought 9s. 6d., so that now onion culture is at a discount.

There are many other vegetables that could be raised with equal facility and marketed during the winter at high prices, but the natives are too conservative to branch out in new directions. Their great-great-great, grandfather discovered that this country was a good one in which to raise onions, and their grandsons have had no desire to do otherwise than did their forefathers. They will continue to raise onions to the end of the chapter.

What this country needs is the influx of a few stirring market gardeners. Those men would find it an easy matter to make a fortune in raising early vegetables for the New York market.

The population of Bermuda consists chiefly of onion and potato planters and boarding house keepers apparently. The farmers are discouraged because of poor prices for products, and the boarding-house keepers see their dull season ahead of them. Consequently they, too, are cast down. But they have had a great many "guests," as they call them this winter.

About 2,500 Americans and Canadians have visited the islands this season. They come every year in increasing numbers, and go away determined to come again. Every steamer now takes its full complement of homeward-bound passengers. The visitors find here a health-giving climate, beautiful scenery, and a population whose habits are at least amusing. Bermudians are never absolutely poor and are always cheerful. They extend a hearty welcome to all comers, but go on in their easy way, apparently pleased that their idiosyncrasies give the visitors something to talk about.

The shops of Hamilton are a revelation. A lady finds it as necessary to go shopping here as she does at home. She enters a store in Front, Reid and Burnaby streets, doubtful if she can get anything approaching what she wants. She looks about the place, sees nothing but a lot of boxes on the shelves, or rolls of cloth in apparent confusion on the counters.

The polite shopkeeper approaches and asks how he can serve her. She asks for what she wants without any hope that she can get it. The shopkeeper disappears perhaps under the counter and hands out a number of boxes and bundles, opens them, and displays to her gaze just the thing. Prices are very reasonable, too, as most of the goods are imported from England, and are subjected to only a uniform duty of 5 per cent.

There is one place called the Tower, much frequented by ladies. The old saying that "everything from a pin to a pulpit" can be bought has its best exemplification there.

A number of English army officers dropped in one day and asked the shop-keeper in a spirit of mischief if he had a pulpit for sale. He said that he had just what they wanted, took them into the basement and in ten minutes had given them a bill of sale for the pulpit. They felt that they were forced to take it, after having made their inquiry. Now they sit before this piece of furniture every Sunday morning and listen to fervid discourses on the follies of mankind. After buying the thing they had it erected in the garrison church in Camp Prospect.

But if a shop-keeper happens to be out of an article he invariably states that it "will be here on the next steamer." Everything depends on the coming or going of the steamer. The night before her departure all is excitement. Everybody is either writing letters or engaged in getting boxes of onions or barrels of potatoes to the wharf. Front street is crowded with a hurrying, bustling crowd. After the boat's departure life sinks back to ebb tide and stays there till the incoming steamer is signalled. Then the people wake up again.

Captain Garven, of the Orinoco, lives in New York, and is perhaps better known than Captain Fraser, of the Trinidad. These two ships form the regular line between here and New York. Coming down on his last trip Captain Garven told of some of his adventures while sailing along the Spanish main. (Once he said he was wrecked, and with his crew of forty men had reached the shore in safety. Suddenly a number of tigers appeared on the scene and began devouring the men. They soon killed all but the captain, and he was bravely fighting for his life, when—

At this juncture a young man broke in upon Captain Garven's story by asking him if he had ever gone tobogganing in the West Indies.

With a look of disgust Captain Garven turned away.

Caused by a Little Wound.
NEWCASTLE, Pa., May 8.—Two weeks ago John Talbot, an iron worker, was engaged in a high jumping contest. A stick of wood was placed crosswise on a bucket on the top of a box, and when Talbot jumped over it one foot struck the stick, knocking it off the bucket in such a way that one end went into the ground and Talbot fell upon the other end, which penetrated his abdomen, inflicting what was considered a slight wound. In a few days he returned to work but became ill on Saturday night and died yesterday of lock jaw.

It Rained Frogs.
JAMESTOWN, Dak., May.—Monday night a small black cloud hanging rather low was noticed to move rather queerly. Suddenly the cloud was lost sight of and a precipitation of frogs was seen. There were several hundred of them and they could be seen hopping up in the street a block away. The theory of some is that the frogs were caught up from some slough in a whirlwind.

NEW RECTOR FOR HAMILTON.

Rev. Mr. Crawford, of Brockville, Will in All Probability be Appointed.

Hamilton Times.

It is almost definitely settled that Rev. Mr. Crawford, now of Brockville, will succeed to the rectorship of the Church of Ascension, Hamilton. He has accepted the call and his name has been accepted by Bishop Hamilton. Rev. Mr. Crawford is an eloquent preacher and a highly esteemed clergyman. As a result of his labors in Brockville 57 persons were confirmed about the middle of April last on the occasion of the visit of the bishop to his church. At Easter last there were 400 communicants on the church roll. He has built up the church himself and its prosperity during the brief period of its existence is to a very great extent due to him. The music bears witness constantly to his talent and influence. The reverend gentleman was the son of Hon. Mr. Crawford, Brockville, who, in his lifetime was a member of the senate of Canada. His wife is a daughter of James A. Henderson, Q.C., LL.D., of Kingston. He is very highly esteemed in the diocese of Ontario.

He has made Queen's university one of the first educational institutions of the continent, and has won for himself by hard, patient, honest work, more even than a continental reputation. He well deserves to be the unanimous choice of his brethren for the moderatorship of the general assembly.

DEATH DEALING CYCLONE

THE CULMINATION OF A WIND STORM IN KANSAS.

A Sparsely Settled Township the Scene of the Cyclone—The List of Those Who Were Killed or Wounded—The Path of the Storm and the Scenes Enacted.

HUTCHINSON, Kansas, May 8.—The wind storm which has been raging over Kansas for the past three days and nights culminated in a destructive cyclone in the eastern part of Stafford county on Monday night. The district visited was sparsely settled or the loss of life and property would have been terrible. There is scarcely a vestige of farm improvement remaining. The casualties so far as known are:

William Crawford, killed outright.

William Bolt, fatally injured.

Oliver Beard, hurt so that he cannot recover.

Jason Beard, internally injured and will die.

A. F. Guinnip, internally injured.

Mrs. Guinnip and babe, the mother internally injured and the babe's thigh broken.

Mrs. Lindsay, seriously hurt.

A little girl of George Deves' fatally injured.

S. S. Crawford, fatally injured.

Mrs. J. Love, seriously injured.

Peter Scarlet, leg broken.

Mrs. John Bartlett, shoulder blade broken and other injuries; will die.

William McVey, internally injured; cannot recover.

Joseph Ferris, injured about the head; will die.

The path of the storm lay through Stafford county extending from the south-west to the north-east slightly east of the centre of the county. The first building struck was the farm house of E. Slade, six miles south of Stafford. The house was swept away and hardly a splinter of it left. The family were considerably bruised, but none have died. The next building to succumb was the home of A. Guinnip, a short distance north east of Slade's. Both the house and barn are gone.

Mrs. A. Potter, a widow, had her house and stable blown away, but the family escaped. The next house in the path of the cyclone was that of Mrs. Lindsay, who lived with her two step-children, Maude and William Blue. The house was torn to pieces and Mrs. Lindsay so injured that she can scarcely recover. George Deves' house was demolished and his little girl fatally injured. S. S. Crawford's residence was blown away and his son William killed.

J. B. C. Cooke's large cattle sheds were destroyed, as were J. W. Burns'. Both lose heavily. J. Love's house is a thing of the past, and his wife was blown fifty feet north of the house in a waggon, to which she clung. It carried her one hundred yards further. The spokes in the wheels were blown out or knocked out by flying timbers. When found Mrs. Love was clinging to the tongue of the waggon. There is no hope of her recovery.

ENTERED A NUNNERY.

A Rich Philadelphian Decides to Renounce the World.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 8.—Miss Kate Drexel, the second daughter of the late Francis A. Drexel, who left $4,000,000 to each of his three daughters, has entered as a postulate or earnest seeker of the order of the Sisters of Mercy in the mother house of the order at Pittsburg. She is not a novice and has not yet entered the order but there are few who know the young lady who doubt that this act of hers amounts to a complete renunciation of her family, her friends and her great wealth. Miss Drexel has meditated this step for some time. She is the most attractive of the daughters left by F. A. Drexel. The youngest daughter, now Mrs. E. D. N. Morrill, who was married a few months ago and her unmarried sister, Lizzie Drexel, will sail from New York for Europe to-day with their uncle, A. J. Drexel. Miss Drexel attended mass in St. John's Roman Catholic church in this city Sunday and chose that sacred place to take farewell of her relatives. She was attired in black and according to custom knelt in front of the altar to the Blessed Virgin Mary. The mass over, her distant relatives and one or two others and her old governess and her maid and one or two faithful servants crossed from the other aisle and bade her farewell. She kissed them all. Although greatly affected she did not shed tears and showed remarkable firmness. All necessary arrangements had previously been made and with her two sisters and Mr. Morrill she drove directly from the church to the station and with them took the train for Pittsburg, arriving at the convent Monday night. Miss Drexel has shown great interest in Indian missions. Some time ago she travelled through the Indian country and gave $150,000 for the work of Catholic missions among the Indians of the Northwest. She has an amiable disposition and her mind has always had a religious turn. She was one of the bridesmaids at her sister's wedding.

A Sunday Paper Under the Ban.

OTTAWA, May 8.—Collectors of customs have been advised that the Detroit Sunday Sun has been placed under prohibition by the postmaster-general and instructed to examine carefully such numbers of that journal as may come under their notice as collectors. Should they find therein any matter "treasonable, seditious,
