SECOND EDITION.

THE LATE MAJOR SHORT.

The Papers Are Full of Regrets—He Was a Noble Fellow.

The Montreal Witness says that like the gallant Lieut. Baynes of the royal artillery, in 1867, that gallant soldier and fine specimen of manhood, Major Short, of "B" battery, sacrificed his life at the call of duty. He was an enthusiastic soldier and was considered in military circles as a man of great talent and likely to make his mark.
The deputy minister of militia and deputy adjutant general, Ottawa, were profoundly grieved at the news of Major Short's untimely death. He had been eleven years connected with the force and a major since 1882.
He leaves a brother in Montreal, Robert Short, advocate, and a sister, wife of Mr. Perry, collector of customs, Sherbrooke, also Mrs. Lloyd, another sister, widow of the late Dr. Lloyd, who was at his death deputy-inspector of hospitals in the British service.
Major Short was instrumental in saving several lives, and was as generous as he was bold and daring. On one occasion, on the way to Quebec on the steamer, one of the men of the battery had fallen overboard, when he leaped into the water and, after a long struggle with the waves to support the man, both were taken out. The major, though a powerful swimmer, was very much exhausted. He once saved a man who was carried away by the current, while bathing near St. Helen's Island. He was a splendid and daring horseman, an excellent boxer, and probably the best amateur actor in the dominion.
In December last he was appointed an extra A.D.C. to the governor general.
A later despatch says: "Major Short stepped into a wooden house on St. Gertrude street, near Sauveur street, followed by Sergeant Walleck to perfect arrangement for its destruction by powder. Hardly had the major and sergeant entered the doorway when gunpowder exploded, presumably by a spark blown through the open windows. The house was hurled intact several feet into the air, but when it fell a chaotic mass the horrified bystanders began to realize that the universal favorite, the intrepid soldier, the gallant Major Short and Sergeant Walleck, the riding master of the battery, lay probably dead or dying under the burning debris. The artillerymen, with a dash, began a hasty life and death dislodgement of the boards and beams and hauled from the ruin the still breathing, but fearfully injured and disfigured body of what was, three minutes before, the stalwart handsome young sergeant whose bearing challenged general admiration. From one arm the ghastly white broken bone protruded, half of one foot had been blown away, both legs were badly broken, face and trunk were wounded, and it seemed almost a miracle to some near by when the pinched bloodless lips framed a request for water. Further efforts to reach the spot where the major lay were perforce suspended, and the battery men unable in most instances to maintain their soldierly bearing from excess of feeling were compelled to stand by with idle hands while the flames cracked and hissed over the remains of their officer and companion in arms. Together they had braved danger with unbroken front in riots and street troubles, when blood had freely flown, without a murmur; they had suffered hardships and borne the brunt of the North-West campaign against rebels under Riel, now with tar stained faces and tottering bent frames they stood around that blazing pyre, some in speechless horror, some with lamentations upon their lips at being so near their hero and yet so helpless.
It was not until three hours had passed that even their impatience could approach the fatal pile, and then when half-burnt beams and rubbish had been thrown aside and a crushed trunk with no legs adhering, and with a fringe of the light hair at the back of the head, about all that remained to identify the body, was what they found and conveyed to their citadel home. The sergeant was tenderly carried to the marine hospital where he revived sufficiently to state that a barrel of powder opened to receive fuse was ignited by a spark, and that a note of warning sprang to the lips of his superior just before the explosion hushed his voice forever. Walleck died at 6 p. m.
Princess Louise and Marquis of Lorne have telegraphed sympathy for sufferers, and also ordering a floral tribute to Major Short. The remains of the gallant Major will leave for Kingston to-morrow. They will be escorted to the train with military honors. Burial at Kingston on Monday.

A Very Sudden Death.

Mrs. Fowkes, wife of the Rev. Joh Fowkes, of the Methodist church, Harrowsmith, died suddenly this morning at two o'clock. She was in her usual health yesterday, and went visiting friends with Mr. Fowkes. They took dinner with Wm. Trusdale and in the afternoon visited Thomas Clow, and in a few minutes after she entered the house she was taken suddenly ill, soon became unconscious, and died in ten hours.

Lashed and Bounced.

HORTON, Kansas, May 17.—Joseph Peltz, a restaurant keeper, was visited by 300 men Wednesday night, because of his cruelty to his step-daughter, aged 13. He was given 72 lashes and warned to leave town at once.

The Fruit Crop.

OSWEGO, May 17.—The indications are favorable for a large crop of fruit. Small fruits make a fair showing with quite an increase in acreage over last season. Pear trees have not blossomed as full as last year, still there is plenty for a good crop. Apple trees are looking fine. The outlook for peaches is not flattering, but still the indications are good. Quince trees are looking well. Cherries and plums are looking exceedingly well.

Captured the Town.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Migister Preston has been informed that Gen. St. Fleur Paul, of Legitimé's army, has taken by assault the almost impregnable town of Enayri, Hayti. This cuts off communication from the north.

ABDUCTION AT TRENTON.

THE GIRL FOUND IN TORONTO AFTER A LONG SEARCH.

Unusual Method Adopted by a Detective to Secure the Knowledge of Her Whereabouts From the Man Who Took Her to Toronto.

Toronto News.
One of the most mysterious cases of abduction which ever interested the residents of Trenton, Ont., was effectually cleared up in Toronto during the present week. Last February Jennie Manning, a seventeen-year-old young lady whose parents reside in Trenton, disappeared under strange circumstances, and it was supposed that she had been abducted. Full particulars as to her disappearance and the consequent search appeared in the papers at that time. Her parents engaged the local police and some outside detectives, and searched all the eastern counties and towns in the quietest manner, but still no clue of the lost girl could be discovered. Coupled with the affair the name of William Cumming, a confectioner and baker, was sometimes mentioned. Previous to the disappearance of Miss Manning, Cumming had removed to Toronto, where he still lives. The popular report was that he skipped from Trenton. Shortly after the girl was missed, Cumming was observed one day on the street in the town in disguise, and was recognized by Chief of Police Hinds, whose suspicions were aroused. A watch was set on Cumming, but he escaped that night and was not seen again. From an unknown source information was received toward the end of February that Cumming was working in Toronto with a baker on Yonge street, near Bloor, named Haag. Mrs. Manning came to Toronto and interviewed Cumming, having found him at the place named. He denied all knowledge of the girl, or that he knew it was her mother that was standing before him. Mrs. Manning went to police headquarters and laid an account of her suspicions before the detectives, and one was detailed to look into the matter. All the restaurant and shops in the centre of the city were searched without avail, and as Cumming was aware that he was being shadowed it was useless to follow him. Mrs. Manning still clung to the belief that her daughter was somewhere in Toronto, and that Cumming knew her whereabouts. Once he made the acknowledgment that detectives would have a difficult task if they began to follow him, as he walked two hours every night before he went to see the girl, thus admitting that she was here. At this stage Mrs. Manning went back to Trenton and had a consultation with the chief of police. At that time, which is now several weeks since, Detective James McLaughlin, of Toronto, was at the Belleville assizes in connection with a case he had worked up in the county, and the chief of police suggested that further proceedings be stayed until Detective McLaughlin was through at Belleville, when he would engage him to come to Toronto and follow up the clue to the end, as there was not much doubt but that Cumming was in communication with the girl.

McLaughlin came here a week ago last Friday, and disguising himself, went to work. He found Cumming at Haag's, and also discovered that he had his wife and seven children living at 14 Beverley place, which runs off McMurrich street. Many ineffectual attempts were made to shadow Cumming, but he was vigilant, and had a great faculty for noting anyone who appeared often around him. Failing other ways, Detective McLaughlin struck on a novel method, which was quite effectual. On Monday morning of this week he noticed Cumming walking on Bloor street westward and followed him. Cumming went down through Queen's park and along University street. Nearly opposite Elm the detective overtook and arrested him. They went along Elm and turned down Center street and entered a house on that thoroughfare. Here McLaughlin caused Cumming's hands to be tied behind his back and his feet were also secured. He was then informed that food would not pass his lips until he made a confession of all he knew of the girl. He was confined in a room in the rear and refused to say anything until yesterday afternoon, when the address of the girl was given up. She was in a private house on Ontario street, and Mrs. Manning, who was in the city, went to the house with a detective and found the girl who ran into the outstretched arms of her mother, and will return home this evening to Trenton. It appears that Cumming led her astray last February at Trenton, and induced her to remain here and keep his company by threats that she would be arrested and sent to the Mercier if known. Even as late as yesterday afternoon Cumming, though weak from fasting, refused to confess, and the detective hit upon the expedient of frying a piece of meat in the next room, which caused the prisoner to cave in. Miss Manning worked a while for Miss Laing, a Yonge street dressmaker, before taking the Ontario street situation.

DRUNKARDS MUST CEASE.

But the Sale of Liquor Will Go on Just the Same—Penalties Imposed.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 17.—Senator Scheffer's drunkard's law went into effect yesterday. It provides that whoever becomes intoxicated by voluntarily drinking intoxicating liquors shall be deemed guilty of the crime of drunkenness and upon conviction shall be punished as follows: For the first offence a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $40 or imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than forty days; for the second offence by imprisonment for not less than thirty nor more than sixty days or by a fine of not less than $20 nor more than $50; for the third and all subsequent offences by imprisonment of not less than sixty days nor more than ninety days.

OF THE WILD WEST STAMP.

He Was Ambitious to Be a Marksman—He Tried His Skill on Friends.

Chicago, May 17.—Frank Jasinski, aged 16, stepped out of his father's saloon last night with a rifle in his hand. Glancing down the street he saw Frank Kiowski, a lad of his own age, standing in the front door of his home. Jasinski raised the rifle, took deliberate aim and fired. Kiowski fell, the ball having passed through his body two inches above the heart. Jasinski then coolly took aim and fired at another acquaintance, Mike McKay, who stood at the front door of his home, 100 feet away, and Mike fell to the ground, the ball having entered six inches below the left shoulder blade. Jasinski escaped. Kiowski's wound is fatal but McKay's is not serious. Jasinski belongs to the gang of young Kubersowski, who shot a lad named Triner last Sunday night, was a member. Jasinski had in his room a "wild west" outfit, including knives and revolvers and a lot of flash literature.

HE CARRIED THE BRICKS.

The Peculiar Feat of a Bricklayer—He is Now a Great Sufferer.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., May 17.—John Williamson, a bricklayer, accomplished a peculiar feat of pedestrianism here. He started Tuesday morning to walk to and from one side of the street to the other for thirty six hours, carrying a four-and-a-half lb. brick in each hand which he had to place on the side of the street, raise himself to full height, pick up the bricks and going across repeat the performance on the opposite side. He was to continue for the full period, being allowed one hour for meals every six hours, and an intermission of fifteen minutes every three hours. Williamson tramped all night and both days, part of the time through a driving rain finishing at six o'clock Wednesday night. Interest in his undertaking grew rapidly and crowds were constantly in attendance, a great deal of money changing hands on the result. When Williamson finished his feet were covered with blisters and his legs and hands were frightfully swollen.

NOT WILLING TO TREAT.

The Indians Do Not Want to Give Up Everything That They Possess.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 17.—The Tribune's special from Standing Rock Agency says: "Recent Washington despatches from prominent men connected with Indian affairs indicate that Gen. Crook and the other commissioners will meet with trouble in negotiating a treaty."
Sitting Bull says: "This will be our last treaty, as hereafter, if we give up our land we will have nothing more that the white man wants. We love our homes, our hunting grounds, and where we were born, and I will feel like the setting sun if our tepees are moved again for the white man."
"Said Old Running Antelope: "This covers the feelings of all."

A BROKEN DOWN SPORT.

Phil Daly, the Well Known Bookmaker, Said to be a Mental Wreck.

NEW YORK, May 17.—It is stated that Phil Daly, the well known sporting man, is afflicted with serious brain trouble, and that the physicians fear that he is breaking down mentally. Every effort seems to have been made to keep this fact from the public, but it is now ascertained that he was stricken down on April 6th, and, until a few days ago, he has remained in strict seclusion at his apartments in this city. He is now at his Long Branch residence, and his physicians have impressed upon him and his family the necessity of his keeping away from all business worry. Among sporting men it is said Mr. Daly's derangement is partly the outcome of strained financial circumstances.

Seizing a Lecturer's Apparatus.

PETERBORO, May 16.—A customs seizure was made in the opera house in a somewhat sensational manner. Roberts Harper was giving his first illustrated lecture in Canada on evictions in Ireland when the collector of customs seized the apparatus in the body of the hall. The young man operating it, not knowing who the officer was, resisted, and Mr. Harper asked for the police. There was considerable excitement, until the meaning of the disturbance was ascertained. Mr. Harper then paid $40 under protest, and the lecture proceeded. The lecturer says that he was told at Montreal that the apparatus was not dutiable, but the local collector received instructions by wire from there to collect duty on parts of the instrument.

Money for the Fair Widow.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—Lawyer S. Spencer Chapman has received a check for $2,000 in settlement of the breach of promise suit brought by Annie Fleming, a buxom widow, against ex-United States Senator John J. Patterson, one of South Carolina's memories in the critical times of 1876. Patterson originally announced that he would fight the case to the bitter end, but when it was found that the case was on the docket for an early date he discovered that he had important business engagements in Chicago at that very time. So he offered the sum named as a balm for the blighted affections of the widow, and she snapped at it.

Drowned Before Their Eyes.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 17.—The families of W. P. Sheretz and W. T. Denham were spending the day yesterday at Lake Front. The twelve year old son of Denham went in swimming and got beyond his depth. Miss Sheretz went into the water to assist him. The boy clung to her and both were drowned. Mrs. Sheretz attempted to save them and was barely saved from drowning.

Worden Held for the Grand Jury.

WATERTOWN, May 17.—James S. Worden, the alleged fire fiend, is held to await the action of the grand jury for firing a paper mill. Recorder McConnell said he could not discharge the prisoner unless he believed that there had been a conspiracy formed, "and this," said the recorder, "I do not believe." Worden was taken to jail, unable to furnish bonds.

Look For Workmen.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 17.—Workmen excavating yesterday beneath where an old house had been torn down in the southern part of the city discovered a quantity of gold and silver. A miserly old woman formerly owned the place. It is thought $10,000 was dug up.

Roberts, M.D., professor in University college, London, Eng., examiner in medicines, Royal College of Surgeons, says in reference to advanced kidney disease: "Complications are met, such as consumption, heart disease, morbid conditions, liver affections. Warner's Safe Cure cures these affections by putting the kidneys in a healthy condition, thereby enabling them to expel the waste or poisonous matter from the system."

BRIGHT'S SUCCESSOR.

Morley the Heir to Elijah's Mantle—What the Liberals Will Do.

LONDON, May 17.—Morley made the finest speech on Wednesday night which he has delivered this year. He sounded more distinctly than before the social note of the liberal programme and defined what the liberals want to do. He said: "We shall not make the world over again in a day. We shall not turn this London purgatory into a paradise, perhaps, in your life time or in mine, but we can go on with the work by making beginnings, and by trying experiments in new directions. We want to give those who plough the ground, and who in the sweat of their brow sow the seed, a rather handsome share in the sheaves when they are reaped. We want that those who weave the garments should not themselves go cold." Morley is proclaimed Bright's successor, the heir to Elijah's mantle.

Still Hearing Evidence.

LONDON, May 17.—Father O'Donovan testified for the defence before the Parnell commission to-day. He said the moonlighters at Tulla were opposed to the league. They had threatened witness, who was under police protection while he was connected with the branch of the league. Father O'Donovan attributed the increase of crime during the league's existence to the action of the landlords in enforcing evictions. Witness had denounced crime from the altar of his church on Sundays. The commission will not make his report to the house of commons until February, 1890.

The Strike Not Settled.

BERLIN, May 17.—The Freisinnige Zeitung says the negotiations between mine owners and the striking miners looking to a settlement of their disputes have been suspended owing to Herr Krabber, a mine owner, declining to entertain the demands of the strikers. The other mine owners were prepared to considered them.

After Information.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The inter-state commerce commission has issued a circular letter addressed to the labor organization of the country soliciting information and discussion upon the question of federal regulation of safety appliances on railroads.
