The Mail has been a little prematu in its commendation of Earl Salisbury's which the Libera's have prepared." That is just what his lordship is not likely to do. The redistribution bill has not passed the House of Lords, he threatens to prevent its passage the time being and to appeal to the people on the old franchise unless Mr. Gladstone helps him to carry on the goverament until the next election. Liberals are not likely to grant him al the favors for which he asks, and they are as ready as the Tories for the dissolution of parliament. Mr. Gladstone is stronger out of office than in it.

Dr. Douglass, Grant's physician, says the disease is following its characteristic course, which is a course of steadily in creasing exhaustion. He does look to a cure from this change; nothing can be a curative, but he hopes to prolong life, and that is the most that can be expected. The General, after a walk recently, was much exhausted. He sank in chair and indicated by signals that he desired pen, ink and paper. They were procured and he wrote nearly half an hour, two papers, one headed, "Memoranda for my family." In it the General wrote that he felt he was failing, and for certain instructions that he desired to be carried out he referred to other and more definite memoranda prepared by him before leaving New York. The other note he folded and addressed to Dr. Douglas. This is sad intelligence, and it is a pretence of accuracy, which JURNISHED PARK VILLA, lately is more than can be said of some late messages descriptive of the condition of occur this month has already ended in the election of a Liberal, Mr. R. Ferguson, of East Kent. A great fuss was made by the Tories of the constituency. With pomp and ceremony they selected a candidate, and, under direction of Mr. Meredith, prepared for a red hot campaign, But at the eleventh hour. Mr. Wilson, their favorite, refused to go to the polls. Party feeling became quite panicky, and for a time the political wire pullers were in a quandary. The outlook brightened a bit when they induced Mr. Houston to take up the banner which his son had cast down again the cause was boomed for all it was worth. When nomination day came, however, the opposition was unrepresented by a candidate. Houston refused to be sacrificed on the altar of his party, and the Liberal was returned by acclamation. The elopers were Matthew Orr, an Englishman employed in the Pantry grocery and John Gamage, an Irishman, employed by Mr. Brame, undertaker. Both were married, and came here from the old country very recently. On Saturday morning John Gamage contracted a bill in the Pantry grocery amounting to about $8. He did not want topay. Mr. Mc-Rae refused credit. Orr advised McRae to give Gamage the goods, and he would pay the bill if the purchaser didn't. The aspect of affairs tonight is that the Tories will refuse to accept office and that Gladstone will be asked to return. The change in the situation is mainly due to Harcourt and Chamberlain, whose speeches the Tories unanimously interpret as indicating such a relentless and unscrupulous opposition to the new government as would destroy it in a month. One curi ous result of the crisis is the making of a return of a united Gladstone govern ment possible. The spirits of the de feated Liberals are rising higher and higher daily. Gladstone looks ten years younger since his fall, which is due to the resurrection of his popularity resulting from his overthrow. He is cheered everywhere. The fulsome and overdone eulogies of his colleagues also prove that he still wields the fierce democracy as no other man can.

Time was when many looked on life assurance in any form as an act of rebellion against God, as in some sort, a building of Babel, an attempt to free ourselves from His care and make ourselves independent of His Providence. But more sober thought has shown this to be a mistaken view, although no doubt some are still to be found who cling to line with the Divine Will for the children ought not to lay up for the fathers | the publication of sales led to considerbut the fathers for the children. Market square. Shortly after their arrival the Wizard Oil men's carriage appeared on the ground. The driver located the carriage at about fourteen yards from the army. The crowd flocked around the oil men's carriage. The army people felt chagrined. Happy Bill Cooper mancevred his forces and they made an attack on the singing oil contingent. The drum was beaten unusually loud, and the soldiers shouted at will covering be forced at probably advanced the top of their voices. "Oh, yes, there's salvation for you." The salvationists circled and marched around the carriage. The drummer, Private Bonny, thumped the sheep-skin for all he was worth. The Arabian horses danced in their harness. Detective Snodden told the drummer to beat easier. He obeyed until told to beat harder by Capt. Spooner. Several gentlemen caught the horses by the heads fearing they would run away. The army then left the square. Capt. Spooner and Private fore the magistrate this morning. They HEARING THE EVIDENCE.

Wilson said that had the restless Arabian horses moved some ir the large crowd would have undoubtedly been injured. The drum was beaten very near to the horses' heads. Mr. Dunnett, Saturday, was won by the former; that | connected with the Shedden Company, the Salvation Army drummer. thought the Army people very injudi-cious in making the noise they did. Cadet James Dougherty did not see the horses becoming frightened when the soldiers were marching around them. The driver did not tighten the reins. The Salvation Army drum probably anfrightened the horses as much as the Army drum. Capt. Spooner said that he told the drummer to beat the instrument louder than he was doing. There was no more enthusiasm than usual. Private Bonny said that he obeyed Snodden first and his Captain afterwards. IMPOSING A HEAVY FINE.

Detective Spodden related the cir-comstances as detailed above. Ald. W.

After the evidence was taken the magistrate said that he had heard the Salvationists were very anxious to save souls. They should be just as anxious to save people's lives. He thought that Bonny had offended by disobeying the policeman when he told him to stop beating the drum. He fined the drummer $20 and costs or one month in gaol. In Spooner's case he reserved decision until to-morrow.

Bonny's father paid the fine.
