The Deserted Farm.

I wandered over the hill, Tom, To the dear old farm, where we in childhood roamed with happy hearts, From cares and trials free. saw the dear old oak, Tom. That stood by the gate, you know, But I sought in vain, for 'twas fallen 'neath

The garden that once was ours, Tom. So bright with blooming flowers, And framed by us with careful hands. In childhood's sunny hours, Is now o'errun with vines and weeds But in one sunny spot plucked this little flower, Tom. This sweet forget me not

It seemed so very strange, Tom, When I entered at the door, to meet no hearty welcome That I'd always met before The rooms were dark and silent, No sounds I used to hear

A woke the sombre stillness. My aching heart to cheer. and when I stood within the room Our mother blessed us all, and left This world of sin and woe. My eyes grew dim with tears, Tow,

It seemed so lonely there; Was more tuan I could bear. I wandcred near the spring, Tom, Where crystal waters pour From 'neath the hill as pure and clear As they did in the days of yore; But the face I saw when I knelt to drink

I'd often seen pictured there. With pain I turned my steps away From the home that once was ours. Now so changed from what it was In childhood's happy hours But time has changed us all, Tom, For on thy brow to-day saw those locks that once were dark

Was not so young and fair As, when I knelt in childhood,

Twill not be long before our God Will call us home to rest From worldly cares and trials, In mansions of the blest. Our earthly race is nearly run. We're waiting on the shore . Soon we'll meet on the other side

The loved ones gone before.

In snowy whiteness lay.

HAUNTED CELLS.

What Our Exchanges Are Telling as | Chost of McConnell, Murderer, Said to Walk in the Corridors of Hamitton Gaol.

Eight years ago Michael McConnell, a Hamilton butcher, murdered Mr. Nelson Mills, a gentleman living in the West End of the ambitious city. Mc Connell was hanged for the crime or March 14th, 1876, and the Hamilton Spectator states the gool is now believed to be haunted by the spectre of the murderer. Says the Spectator: With Mc. Punch intimates that the Queen gave Connell's death it might reasonably be it seems that his perturbed spirit will Iwo Boston shopkcepers have been not rest quietly beneath the cold, cold the east basement corridor. On the western side of the corridor the "black holes" or punishment cells are situated. These are small apartments provided with nothing. Prisoners are put there for six, twelve and twenty-four hours, according to the nature of the offence. Now a man might naturally be presumed to have a horror of staying in a dark and comfortless cell, but prisoners dread to go, not only for that reason, but because they declare they are haunt ed by the ghost of the man who was hanged on that wild March morning so many years ago. At night they say the ghost flits from room to room and tramps up and down the long corridor with a ceaseless stride. On the night of March 14th they claim that the awful scene on the scaffold is all gone over again, and a ghostly figure, with a black cap on top, falls through a trap door and dances for a minute in mid air. Then all is still. The figure straightens out, and death claims its own. The turnkey of the jail said to a Spectator reporter that the bravest and best prisoner in the place would cry like a child and consent to undergo any punishment sooner than be put in one of the black holes with Mc-Connell's ghost to keep him company. pray not to be consigned there. Governor Henry was spoken to. He laugh. ed at the idea and said he had never heard of it before.
