SOME OF HIS POSTIC GEMS. In his new work we find many of his richest productions while a resident of Kingston. Some of these have been published in the WHIG-and what delightful memories some of them revive? -while others are new and exceedingly creditable. The "Epistle to a Poetical Friend," from which we have already has just reached us. Our correspondquoted, in its epigrimatic style, its pithiness and force, is worthy of Burns; and we do not believe there is anything in lows: print of greater merit, considering the circumstances which led to its conception, than the impromptu response sent by St. Andrew's Society of Kingston to a greeting from the brethren in Montreal, dining there in 1869, on St. Andrew's night, and having Prince Arthur as one of their guests.
