A COURT SCENE.

Mrs. Potts Charged With Using Threatening Language - Evidence Taken.

This morning there was a flutter in the police court. Style and beauty were largely represented. Mrs. Addie Potts, in seal skin sacque and garnet colored clothing, was brought before the Magistrate on a peace warrant. She tripped into the court, her gossamer hanging loosely over her shoulders, and dropped into a seat near R. Shaw, her counsel. W. H. G. Savage prosecuted, T. H. McGuire acting as his counsell It was admitted that foolish threats had been made, but Mrs. Potts had no weapon by which a hole could be bored in Mr. Savage. There has been aggravation on both sides. The people living alongside Mrs. Potts and the landlord of the house are very anxious she should leave. This she refuses to do until her term of occupation expires. The case went to trial and the evidence was heard. Mr. Savage desired the peace warrant duly executed, as in his estimaticn the woman was dangerous. One witness said Mrs. Potts' tongue worked on a swivel. She had threatened to exterminate Mr. Savage. Another wit ness said that Mrs. Potts told her she had a revolver in her house and that she could soon scatter a crowd. The witness concluded by saying "Mrs. Potts went to the bureau to get the revolver and I made for the doop." The case was adjourned for a day in order that fur ther evidence could be secured.

Bro. Dunn was not aware that the Oddfellows at the Council Board made wonderful speeches, but Bro. Adams would, before the year was out, do himself credit. Battery. But he thought the citizens did not take sufficient interest in them. The 14th was a credit to Kingston. The members of this battalion would always be found ready and willing to answer the call to duty. In regard to the Kingston Field Battery he would say that it was composed of a fine body of yeomanry, who left their farms yearly, went to camp and there became efficient in drill. The merchants' drive was over, and the next thing on the tapis was the volunteers' camp, which the citizens should try to get located here. The assembly of 3,500 volunteers would cause the expenditure of consid-

They had some grand schemes on hand now, such as the lighting of the streets by electricity and the draining of the city. He expected to see a hallelujah time at the next meeting of the City

Bro. Dunn thought Bro. Adams was wrong in stating that there was a great deal of trickery in the Council. He had a great deal to find out. He thought the city had a good Council this year an l if the Aldermen exert their influence in the right direction the citizens will be greatly benefitted. # THE LECTRIC LIGHT.

THE EXHIBITION VIEWED BY THOUSA OF PEOPLE-CHANGING THE DARK NESS INTO THE BRILLIANCY OF SUNLIGHT.

The Experiment Not Wholly a Success Because of an Insufficiency of Power-The Juveniles of the City Having a Happy Time-Talking About the Electric Sys tem-Manager Ross Will Remain Until, a Proper Demonstration is Given.

witness the Thompson-Houston electric system. The experiment, however, was not as great a success as the Manager desired. The motive power was not sufficient, consequently the light was not as powerful nor as brilliant as it was expected to be. It was about 7:05 o'clock when the light flashed, but for a moment. In the engine room of the WHIG office half a dozen nien were busily engaged in perfecting the arrangements in order to make the experiment as successful as possible. Two wires, attached | time to a wall controller, ran out of the office, one a positive wire and the other a negative wire. These two wires made a circuit of the five lamps suspended along King Street and in the British American Hotel. The engine flew around with great rapidity, the dynamo clicked and threw out sparks of a blueish brilliant color. The operator would put a square piece of copper attached to a handle over a button and the current

FLASH OVER THE WIRES, lighting up the lamps, but not for a long time, as the power of the engine was unequal to the task imposed upon it. The Manager, however, desired to give as brilliant a demonstration as he could, so the lamps at King's drug store and Doolan's saloon were cut off. The lights then left burning were in the office of the British American Hotel and in front of the WHIG office. These two, when properly worked, cast a bright white light, chasing the shadows away and changing the darkness into the brilliancy of day. For several bours thousands of people viewed the sight. The Wino light was gazed at and all manner of remarks made about it. The gamins of the city raced about the illuminated street, fired snow balls at each other and slid down in the slush. They enjoyed the sight, and if unlearned les sons were a common occurrence in the schools to day the electric light must be set down as the primary cause. In the office of the British American Hotel the chief citizens assembled and dis cussed the light and its possibilities. It flickered at times and even its brilliancy was somewhat dimmed, but this was the result of a lack of motive power. At times, however, the illumination was grand. The gas jets that blazed near by looked like tallow candles. The citizens chafed each other an I remark

About 8.30 o'clock Manager Ross ap peared and the Mayor observed that if he had any remarks to make the company wouldbe pleased to hear them. The Manager removed his cigar, doffed

"This demonstration of the electric light speaks for itself, but I consider it unsatisfactory. The power was greatly insufficient and the corrent generated was far less than that required. The dynamo, to give a proper current, required to make 950 revolutions a mi ante, while the one in use only made about 148. The result was that instead of a light of 2,000 candle power one of only about 200 can ile power was given. "I intend to remain here," said Mr. Ross, "until I can make a proper demonstration, and I will remove the lynamo to a place where sufficient power can be had, and the probability is that a dozen or more lights will be given." The quantity of iron and the other attractions in the printing house caused much gravitation. The dynamo was like a loadstone. For this rea#### son much power was lost. GASPING FOR POWER.

At this moment there was a hissing sound caused by the lamp, and this, Mr. Ross remarked, was caused by there not being sufficient power to force the current from one wire to the other. He went on to say that in the United States 28,000 lights were burned, and some 400 lights in Canada. He referred to the cheapness of the light. A factory in Massachusetts, with a floor space of 800x800 feet, was lit for $2.50 per hour. while previously the gas cost $12.50 per hour. Mr. Ross informed the company regard to the electric light they would that the institution he was connected with was not a lighting, but a manufac turing concern. They had a factory in Montreal where electrical apparatus was made, and he only came to Kingston to demonstrate to the citizens the benefits to be secured through electric lighting, and to make a market for the machinery manufactured by them. local company generally looked after the lighting. The company he represented introduced the system, and then handed the works over to the local concern to conduct. He did not discuss the manner of running the electric lights, but answered any questions asked of him. The electric light

COULD NOT COMPLTE WITH GAS in small spaces but in lighting large spaces they could do the work more successfully. They had lights of a movable character for houses. Dynamo machines the larger the number of lights utilized the cheaper the cost. Three lights were capable of illuminating a space of 75x125 feet if the ceiling was about 15 feet high Kingston could be lighted in two ways. Firstly, by a system in vogue in the Southern and Western cities, by means of towers. The streets here were straight and by placing towers at the head of them and about 150 feet-high, and reflecting the light backward the illumination would be perfect. Seven or eight King Street was crowded with people | towers would make Kingston appear as last evening, with those who desired to | if under moonlight. Secondly, the wires could be strung from house to house and the lamps hung in the centre of the street, 50 or 60 feet high. This system was adopted in Philadelphia. Mr. Ross referred to the advantages of illuminating by electricity. In case of a fire the city could be quickly lighted, and besides surplus power could be used for heating or driving purposes. He demonstrated that no heat was generated by the light by placing his hand over the lamp and keeping it there for some

ANOTHER TEST TO NIGHT.

This evening another test will be made from the Wmo office, and it is expected that better effects will be reached consequence of changes that have been made in the pulleys and belting. On Friday the dynamo will be removed to Drennan's factory and an exhibition given on Saturday night on a larger scale. Twelve lights will probably be utilized, the engine being a 30 horse

The dynamo and electric apparatus is in charge of John Moxom, foreman of the American Electric and Illuminating Company in Montreal. He is a valu able man, experienced and "as true a gold." Manager Ross is indebted to Messrs. McEwen & Son for the assist ance given in connection with the de monstration.

An old gentleman of about 80 years was sitting in the WHIS office last night watching the dynamo as it flew around. The operator said to him, "When you were a young man you never seen a machine like this running electric light. "No," said the patriarch, "and if I' died last year I wouldn't have seen it

FORMING A COMPANY. The Mayor and Aldermen have taken great interest in the demonstration, and not only attended the exhibition and made minute enquiries in regard to it but also tendered Manager Ross all the courtesies within their power. They said he could have the use of the city engines or any of its properties in order to demonstrate the advantages of the light to the citizens. The exhibition, as far as it went, was so satisfactory that we believe a movement is on foot to establish a 100-light station. The matter in in the han is of enterprising and respectable citizens, who are satisfied that lighting by electricity is remunerative and destined to be the light of the future. Immediate steps will be taken to organize a company, and supply light and power to those who may require it. Already some fifty persons have intimated their wil linguess to have their premises lit up

The last contract awarded to the American Electric and Illuminating Company is for the lighting of the city of Hartford. By references to recent publications we observe that Mr. Ross' company has, during last year, in the New England States, placed more lights and electrical dynamo machines than all the other arc companies combined.

How Reports Grow. Last week upon information furnished by a citizen we reported that a fuss had taken place at Mr.IRvan's Hotel, Oates, during a cancing party. We were sur prised by a prompt denial by a friend of Mr. Ryan and sent to our informant, who reiterated the story. Mr. Ryan himself came forward and stated that there was not a shadow of foundation for the story. We then asked our informant for an explanation, and while he contended for the truth of his statement he could not furnish names or evi dence, though representing that he was not a guest on the occasion. It became necessary to bring Mr. Ryan and the informant together when the latter's story vanished into air. There had been no party at Mr. Ryan's, no whisnev excesses, no fight, nor black eyes. It was a pure concoction, and some imaginary Mr. Johnson, now in Toronte, is blamed for it all.
