There's an interest nowise neglected And yet rather sad and forforn. Which deserves to be nicely protected I refer to the extract of corn. For this we at last raise the issue, Intending to put it right through.
Of a tariff for revenue only,

But a tariff for whickey, too. Away with the war's heavy taxes. Producing far more than we need, Cease grinding the Eastern men's axes And putting the Eastern men's greed But remember the still and its product So precious to me and to you, And go in for a revenue tariff, But a tariff for whiskey, too.

For Whiskey, Too.

For some it may seem rather risky. Peculiar, cranksided, unwise, To stand upon barrels of whiskey, With all that the standing implies; But the song that we raise in a chorus— How gladly we all took the cue:

There's a moral i fea in the wood pile, ] Though just what it is I cannot say; And some of our men have a good pile Of taxes on whiskey to pay; And so we cry, Down with Protection? The old must give place to the new. And hurrah for even the tariff, But a tariff for whiskey, too !

ALD, SHAW'S BY-LAW.

A Dealer Declares that it Will be a Terrible Hardship-Talk from a Moral Standpoint

Ald. Shaw's by law, which has for its object the removal of every obstruction from the thoroughfares, will come up City Conneil. It will probably pass. A number of merchants have petitioned for such an ordinance. There are opponents to it, of course, but these are principally confectioners, fancy dealers, grocers and a few who are interested to a larger extend than dry goods men in public displays. One dealer, when questioned as to the measure, remarked: "I don't think we obstruct the sidewalks so much as to incommode the people. We put out goods and attract trade. Hundreds of sales are made simply by the showing of articles on the branch railway built from some point on sidewalks. Had the goods been inside few of the purchasers would have thought of buying them. In the coufectionery line it would be a hardship to compel the merchants to remove their stands. A SIZZING PEANUT BOASTER arrests attention and the dealer solls much rock cutting, starting from the his perishable goods in abundance. said point running near the boundary | Again, in winter, the windows are frost ed over and a stranger cannot tell what kind of goods is sold inside. I object to den to Enterprise. On this route there | the sidewalk being too much taken up are several places where the indications by the exhibition of wares, but no one can object seriously to a merchant putting out a few articles to draw custom. The practice is in vogue in all parts of the world, and should Ald. Shaw's bylaw pass it will be violated in many

AN OPPOSITE OPINION. A merchant, discussing the other side of the question, said: "I have lost more than I ever made by the foolish fashion of exhibiting goods upon the street. I have had to put out my goods because my neighbors did so. If Rough cattle and bulls were more plen- the by law passes it will place all the dealers on an equal footing. By the rain, sun and dust our goods are damaged and shose who buy the exposed articles are never satisfied. I can't see where the enterprise is in putting half the contents of the shop on the street Then, we must look at the matter from a moral stand point. The exhibit of fine wares gives people a longing for them and temptation is placed in their way. Only a few days ago we read of rates; sheep sold at from $4 to $10 each | the larcenies committed by boys too small to be punished by imprisonment.

The articles PILFERED BY THESE LADS were hung outside. The youth of Canada are so precocious that they love to handle and keep that which is not their own. Thus we are, to some extent, responsible for crime. Our city will be just as lively when the sidewalks are clear as when they are piled with goods of every description. The printing houses and some of the manufactories make no public displays, but who ever thought the Committee, that churchmen must that their prosperity depended on such a proceeding? I hope the Aldermen will do their duty and pass the by-law.
