

GENTLEMEN!

WE HAVE MADE A SPECIAL CONTRACT WITH THE LATEST MANUFACTURERS FOR ALL STYLES OF WHITE SHIRTS, COLLARS, CUFFS, LAUNDRY, &c.

LINEN COLLARS AND CUFFS. On such favourable conditions that we can give you the most wholesale rates, giving you better value than any other house in the city.

NOTE A FEW LINES. Unwashed shirts, no-inflated fronts, linen buttons and cuffs, 6/6 each, or 6 for 33/6; usually at 7/6 each.

BEST DRESSED SHIRTS. Fine linen button and cuffs, with no-inflated fronts, 1/3 each, or 6 for 5/6; usually at 7/6 each.

SPECIAL. An Extra Heavy Dress Shirt, double button no-inflated front, no cuffs, some gentlemen prefer this style, at 1/3 each, or 6 for 5/6; worth every penny at 1/3 each.

REGATTA SHIRTS. A Special Heavy Make, two collars, or with cut attached, 1/3 each, or 6 for 5/6; same goods retailed in town at 1/3 each, or 6 for 5/6; worth every penny at 1/3 each.

UNLAUNDRIED SHIRTS. No-inflated fronts, washed linen buttons and cuffs, 6/6 each, or 6 for 33/6; usually at 7/6 each.

LINEN CUFFS. Five 3/4 length, 2/6, or 6 for 12/6; linen turn down collars for 1/3; linen stand up collars, all desirable styles, at 6/6 a pair.

HARDY & MURRAY. LEADERS IN LOW PRICES. 176 Princess Street. April 26.

FINEST STOCK OF TIES, SHIRTS, COLLARS, CUFFS, BRACES, &c. TO BE HAD AT THE

New Gent's Furnishing Store, 306 PRINCESS STREET. J. R. RATTENBURY.

ROOM PAPER. T. SAVAGE & SONS. DES TO CALL ATTENTION TO THEIR NEW IMPORTATIONS OF

Paper Hanging, Borders, &c. For the season of 1904.

MONEY TO LEND. Money to Lend at Lowest Rates—ROBERT SHAW, PRINCESS STREET.

ADAMS & WESTLAKE'S. COAL OIL. JUST RECEIVED AT ROBERT'S HARDWARE HOUSE.

DIAMOND COUGH REMEDY. A Concentrated Extract of Wild Cherry, Bear Brand and Eucalyptus, with other medicinal ingredients, is the best remedy for coughs, colds, croup, asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness, &c.

Wade's Drug Store. King St. near the Market Square.

YOUR FACE. Tan & Freckle Lotion. AND BY H. WADE, CORNER KING AND BROCK STS., KINGSTON.

NEW MUSIC BOOKS. FOR SALE BY JOHN HENDERSON & CO. PRINCESS ST., KINGSTON.

Retailing at Only 75c Each. IDEAL BOOKS—A collection of the Crown & Co. (The best) and the popular (The best) of the best of the best.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

KINGSTON ACADEMY. (Brock Street, between Jarvis and Division St.) NEXT TERM BEGINS ON MONDAY, 4th April. Fees—$5 per term. Tuition—$10 per term. Board—$10 per term. In studies in above fee. W. SPANKER, B.A., Principal.

MASONIC. THE REGULAR MEETINGS OF THE City Lodge will be held as follows: Ancient St. John's Lodge, No. 3, on Thursday, March 25, at 7:30 p.m. in the Masonic Hall, over Wilkinson's Store, Princess Street.

A. O. U. W. L'ESTRANGE LODGE, No. 81, Ancient Order of United Workmen, meets on the second Thursday of every month in the Oddfellows' Hall, over Wilkinson's Store, Princess Street.

CITY AND VICINITY. To-day's Probabilities. Moderate winds, mostly southwest and south, fine warmer weather.

Another Prisoner Arrives. Sheriff Jarvis and son arrived in the city to-day with a lad named Chester Fryer, from Toronto, sentenced to two years imprisonment in the Kingston Penitentiary.

Change of Hall. The trustees of Victoria Hall having increased the rent for next week the week's performances of "Gaiety" will open in the City Hall on Wednesday evening instead of in Victoria Hall on Monday evening.

Has He Property? The amount of the verdict against James Nesbitt, secured by one of the Partells, for false arrest, not having been paid, Judge Henderson to-day examined witnesses to ascertain whether the ex-politician was possessed of any thing to meet the claim.

On the Wrong Side. J. P. Giddler issued a license authorizing the marriage of an Ogo gentleman. The duplicate copy was filed away, but among the "settled accounts." After a hearty laugh Mr. Giddler decided that it was all the same, the man was probably settled for anyway.

A Class Formed. A class of public school pupils has been opened in the Collegiate Institute building under the charge of Miss Hentig. The instructor says that during the month there was a falling off in the attendance of the junior classes, owing, it is reported, to the talk of fervers in the schools.

Chinese Gordon. Rev. W. Briggs, Toronto, has published a biographical sketch of "Chinese Gordon." The sketch is very complete, and every one wants to know about the brave soldier who undertook the settlement of the Soudan difficultly and is now a resident of the beleaguered city of Khartoum.

First Excursion Announced. The Oldfellows of the city have chartered the steamer Mand for an excursion to Brockville on the 10th of July, the day on which the Uniformed Eucampment drill takes place. A prize of $300 will be given to the best drilled encampment. The Kingston boys intend to compete.

A Popular Young Man Gone. We are sorry to record the demise of another of Kingston's sons, John E. Norris, the event taking place at Peterboro on Thursday morning. Deceased was just in the prime of life, and his future seemed to be bright when death came. A large number will mourn his loss. We sympathize with his friends on his death.

He Gets His Salary. Yesterday a Committee of the County Council had a conference with Mr. Whiting, and, after discussing the case of Corbett, it was decided to pay him his salary in full. The gaoler was, therefore, to-day paid, not only the full amount claimed by him for April, but a balance for March of $18.60. It is to be hoped the difficulty is now at an end. His continuance can lead to no end.

A Statement Corrected. Mr. J. Bajus desires us to correct a statement to which publicity was given in last night's News, that an effort would be made to sell the Salvation Army barracks after the retirement of Capt. Hughes, and that he (Bajus) had been seen about it. Mr. Bajus says he knows nothing about the alleged transaction, and that circumstances are such that Major Moore cannot sell the building.

Callender's Ministers. A good audience greeted this troupe at the Opera House last evening, and those present at the conclusion of the entertainment expressed themselves as being perfectly satisfied. The performance was unique in every respect. The singing and dancing were of a high order and the jokes fresh and good. The applause during the evening was frequent and deafening, an evidence that the efforts of the company were fully appreciated. There is no doubt that if the minstrels return to Kingston at a future date they will be liberally supported.

A Long and Severe Illness. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Clark returned to the city yesterday and are now at the British American Hotel. Last fall Mr. Clark was about to start for New York when he learned that his son George, a graduate of the Royal Military College, was ill at Springfield, Mass. He has, indeed, his bedside and found him suffering from typhoid fever. The doctor broke it up suddenly, causing blood poisoning. For four months the young man remained very ill. His limbs were paralyzed, and frequently elevated higher than his head. His sufferings were intense, and only by the most careful attention was his life saved. He is now able to be moved and gradually recovering.

Laying the Corner Stone. Arrangements have been completed for the laying of the corner stone of the new Queen Street Methodist Church. The ceremony will occur on Wednesday, May 14th, in the presence of the lay and clerical representatives of the four uniting Methodist churches in the Kingston district. The stone will be laid by Mrs. B. M. Britton. In the evening a tea-meeting will be held. Twenty years ago, on May 14th, the corner stone of the present edifice was laid. After the new church is built the edifice will be utilized as a Sabbath School. It will be called "Wesley Hall."

HERE AND THERE.

Laconic Arrangement of Items of Local and General Interest—Gossip that is Readable.

School Board meeting next Thursday. Look out for Gasonov. He is coming Wednesday.

The Streets Committee have decided to open their meetings to the press. The Montreal foot-ballers, sixteen in number, are at the Burnett House.

There are now seven vacancies in the clerical appointments of the Diocese of Ontario.

Capt. Hughes has an original hymn in the War Cry, entitled, "Sinner Think."

On Tuesday night some tramp straggled the clothes line of Mr. Smyth, Johnson Street.

Remember the Christian Mission Gospel Meeting in the City Hall to-morrow night at 8:15 o'clock.

The Finance and Streets Committee did no business last night beyond the passage of general accounts.

The electric light is well liked in Belleville, and a large number of merchants have adopted it.

The 14th Batt. P. W. O. Rifles will visit Toronto on July 1st. They will have a great time if they do.

John McKay purchased about 6,000 muskrat skins to-day. The skins are worth from 17c. to 15c. each.

A bicycle club has been formed at Portsmouth; W. Moore, President, and J. Davidson, Secretary.

On Wednesday a parlor concert was held at Mrs. Byers' residence, (Catherine St.) It was attended by many.

Rev. A. W. Cook, of Pakenham, the new curate of St. George's Cathedral, and family, will arrive on Tuesday.

The real and personal property and taxable income of Gananoque is assessed at $678,125. The population is 3,079.

The wind yesterday blew down several fences, including those of Col. Duff, Montreal Street, the car works and G. T. R.

The Napanee Council has doubled the fees for billiard tables, and insist that masons shall not be allowed where they are.

The Napanee bandmen have taken the oath of allegiance and are now a part of the 17th Batt. They number eighteen.

Dr. Kennedy, of Bath, while driving a spirited horse, was thrown from his carriage and injured about the face, head and legs.

The finder of a large key, with purple ribbon attached, lost on Thursday, in the city, will please return it through the Winto office.

The Kingston and Napanee clubs have a lacrosse match on the 26th inst. They play an exhibition game in the evening under the electric light.

The body of an infant was found in a box at Gananoque. It appeared to have been killed, but medical testimony disposed of that impression.

Report is current that the manager of the Grand Trunk R.R. thinks about purchasing the Thousand Island line, running out of Gananoque.

Monday night's Council meeting will be one of the liveliest of the year. The question, "To be or not to be," will, perhaps, have a new significance.

Ald. McKelvey goes to Hamilton next week to see Kelley's steam rollers. The machine will be brought here for trial, and, if satisfactory, it will be purchased.

The wind yesterday, between 10 and 2 o'clock, blew at the rate of 38 miles an hour. Such a rush of the invisible has not been experienced for a long time.

The High School Inspector says that in quantity and quality of work the Sydenham School is surpassed by none in the province having the same number of teachers.

It is expected that the rate to Toronto via Kingston & Pembroke and Ottawa & Quebec R.R.'s will be lower than that at present collected by the Grand Trunk R.R.

Mr. Callender, proprietor of the Callender minstrels, pays Kingston the poor compliment of saying that it has not changed much since he was in it last—15 years ago.

Two young men belonging to Portsmouth are going to Wolfe Island next week to make arrangements for a picnic to be held there by the Young Irishmen on May 24th. A ploughing match is on the programme.

A. Caldwell & Son, Kingston, are selling eighteen inch x 11 clear shingles at $3 per 1,000; six inch x 12 clear butts, $2; shingles at $1.25; square edged pine boards from $6 up.

Our United States consular officers are still looking for the Junius who wrote "The Bread Winners." In Toronto the bread winners are looking for the man who raised the price of bread.

The public meeting on Tuesday evening is extensively advertised, and hundreds of copies of the resolution, passed by the Council on Monday week, have been circulated for public information.

A carnival of fire crackers has broken out among the boys in the streets in advance of the Queen's birthday, and last evening they were bent upon frightening ladies and horses. The police must do their duty and make a few examples at once to stop the annoyance.

The annual meeting of the Canada Methodists in the Kingston District occurs in the Sydenham Street Church on May 13th. The lay representatives meet on the 14th, and on the 15th the provincial meeting composed of the delegates of four bodies occurs. The meeting opens at 9 o'clock.

Laying the Corner Stone. Arrangements have been completed for the laying of the corner stone of the new Queen Street Methodist Church. The ceremony will occur on Wednesday, May 14th, in the presence of the lay and clerical representatives of the four uniting Methodist churches in the Kingston district. The stone will be laid by Mrs. B. M. Britton. In the evening a tea-meeting will be held. Twenty years ago, on May 14th, the corner stone of the present edifice was laid. After the new church is built the edifice will be utilized as a Sabbath School. It will be called "Wesley Hall."

A WOMAN'S ADDRESS.

ELOQUENTLY DEFENDING WOMEN'S DESIRE FOR INTELLECTUAL ADVANCEMENT—WHAT ARE THEIR RIGHTS? THEIR SPHERES?

The Day is Upon Us, the Night is O'er—No Distinction Between the South and the North—Women's Sphere as a Whole—What is to be Done?—The Future of the Race—The Intellectual and Moral Advancement of the Race—The Future of the Race—The Intellectual and Moral Advancement of the Race.

On Monday afternoon, at the closing exercises of the Women's Medical College in the City Hall, Mrs. Alice McGillivray, M.D., read an interesting and interesting address. She said: "With what feelings of wonder and gratitude we realize the cause of this convention we cannot express. When we see in this the successful close of the first year of the Women's Medical College we recognize that the day is upon us, the night is over. When we think, too, that it is only a few months since we were in a sea of trouble, when we could only hope that sometime, somewhere, somehow, good would be the final goal of all, when the beam that had slanted forward was all but overcast by the clouds that arose, we never dared to look for so speedy a fruition of our dreams. In the light of such good fortune we may indeed hope for all things and doubt not that "through all the ages an increasing purpose that the thoughts of men are widened by the process of the same."

It is in this, this widening of thought, the fuller growth of generosity, that we look for the warmth that is to nourish us and mature the infancy of this happy venture, an infancy that is naturally healthy and presages a long and useful life. As the first graduating class we deem it a proper occasion, before saying our adieu, to give, as far as may be, in a brief way, our reasons for holding that all sources of education should be freely opened to woman as to man.

FIRST—AS TO OUR RIGHT. It has always seemed to us so very plainly right, and so little in any way reasonable to be said to the contrary, that we have scarcely considered it a matter of apologies. Since we belong to the "genus homo," since humanity is "the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally, whence the authority derived that presumes to say to an equal creature, thus far and no farther shalt thou go? When the great Author of all created us of the human race, and gave us the nature and souls that make us mortal, He never made distinction between the souls of men and women; and since the soul, the mind, is the dominant power of the creature, and the "highest is that which is the noblest work of God," and "on earth is none lordlier than they," then who is there should say: "This may you do. This may you not do?" Aside from the laws of the country, that protect and uphold all men and women equally