"Yes, I will go," said the young girl.
The blush had left her cheek and she bad become a trifle pale. She had not raised her eyes from the floor during her mother's little speech; and when i was over, and her mother had gone back to her room, Alice cast one glance at her mirror, and with a firm face walked down the stairs to the drawingroom. Farnham heard the rustle of her dress with a beating of the heart which filled him with a delicious surprise. " l am not past it, then," was the thought that came instantly to his mind, and in that one second was a singular joy.

When she came in sight on the stairs, it was like a sudden enchantment to him. In the midst of his tumultuous feeling a trivial thought occurred to him; "I am shot through the heart by the blind archer," he said to himself; and he no longer laughed at the old-fashioned symbol of the sudden

Shall we Let the Child Die hard-hearted political economist, looking at a pale and punny child feebly gasping as it hes upon a pillow, says that the child might as well die. It is so weak and poor that its life will never be worth much anyhow. There are already a good many people in the world who are not of much account anyhow.
