TO DAY.

Don't tell me of to-morrow Give me the boy who'll say, That, when a good dead's to be done, "Let's do the deed to-day." We may all command the present if we act and never wait But repensance is the phantom Of a past that comes too late. Don't tell me of to-morrow; There is much to do to-day If we throw the hours away. Every moment has its duty Who the future can foretell Then why put off till to morro

What to-day can do as well? Over a Coffin-Lid.

"She-was-a-good-wife-to-me! A good wife, God bless her!" The words were spoken in trembling accents over a coffin-lid. The woman asleep there had borne the heat and burden of life's long day, and no one had ever heard her murmur; her hand was quick to reach out in a helping grasp to those who fell by the wayside part. When boon companions deserted serted him, he went home and found her waiting for him.

"Come from your long, long roving, On life's sea so bleak and rough, Come to no tender and loving. And I shall be blest enough."

That had been her love-song—always on her lips or in her heart. Children had been born to them. She had rear-Her hand had led them to the utter-And then she had comforted him, and sent him forth strong home and-cried. What can a woman do but cry?—and trust?

Well, she is at rest now. But she could not die until he had promised to "bear up," not to fret, but to remember how happy they had been. Yes, it is even so. For she was blest in giving, and he in receiving. It was an equal partnership after all. "She-was-a-good-wife-to-
