A Scene in the Council.

Yesterday afternoon Messrs. Hogan

and Haycock had a cotillion in the County Council Chamber, a reminder of the events of former days. There was any amount of fire, and awakened most of the members. It began about wire fences and both men "wired in" for all they were worth. The doughty reeve of Kingston agitated for a grant toward the construction of a barbed wire fence between the city and Cataragui. With it snow blockades would be a thing of the past, and the Council would be more than recouped by the increased revenue from tolls. Mr. Haycock had not been. fairly seated himself when Mr. Hogan congratulated him upon his change of base. He had advocated the giving of ten feet of land on each side of the road to those who erected barbed wire fences, but Mr. Haycock had opposed the scheme. He was now glad to learn of his gradual conversion. Then Mr. Haycock got excited and filled the air with elequence. He raked down Mr. Hogan and expatiated upon the disadvantages of his scheme. He concluded thusly: "No, my dear fellow, you need not flatter yourself that I have changed my opinions in the matter." The Wolfe Islander warmly replied that the county should not stand the expense suggested by Mr. Haycock, and the latter sand that Wolfe Island received a large share of the money paid by the taxpayers of the townships in the shape of tolls, and that, too, without contributing one cent of the money. An adjournment shut off the discussion.
