The Meeting with his Wife - His Moth cr's Affection and Joy-"Arthur, Arthur Home."

There was a great concourse of peoole at Portsmouth when the Greely ex-

After the commanding officers had gone back to their ships Mrs. Greely was put on board the secretary's barge and conveyed to the Thetis, where her husband was. As the lady passed down the companion-way to the barge she walked with a firm tread and showed no signs of emotion other than biting her lips and tightly clutching ber hands. Lieut. Greely had not been informed that his wife was about to come on board the Thetis and a few minutes before her arrival, in conversation with Commander Schley, the hero said he did not expect to see her to-day as she probably had not been able to reach their so soon. When the secretary's barge was seen to leave the Tennessee with Mrs. Greely and her two brothers, sitting in the stern sheets. Commander Schlev said to Lieut. Greely: "Lieutenant, I would like to see you in my cabin for a few moments." Commander Schley entertained Lieut. Greely in conversation about Arctic matters until a peculiar signal was given on a boatswain's whistle to indicate that Mrs. Greely was on board and ready to meet her husband. Now the lady trembled in every limb, her breath came in gasps and her whole frame shook with emotion. With trembling steps she went to the cabin door, and just at the instant she entered, Commander Schley left the room, leav-

It was noticeable on board the Thetis that everybody shed tears when Mrs. Greely entered the cabin where her husband was. Late in the afternoon the mother of Lieut. Greely came from Newburyport and was taken at once on board the Tennessee. Shortly after she was put in the Secretary's barge and taken on board the Thetis. When she arrived there Mr. and Mrs. Greely and the latter's brothers were
