A SLIP OF CRUMPLED PAPER, How it Led to the Discovery of Great Crime-Conspiracy and Murder.

At Nantes, France, in March 1851, Jacques De Mit, a sailor, aged 27, was convicted of murder, and sentenced to the galleys for tite. He begged the court to look after his sister, a child of six years, of whom he had taken care since the death of her mother two years previously. Among the spectators in the court room was a Monsieur Sabiere. He manifested much interest in the child whose name was Marie, and told the judge that, if his wife consented, he would adopt her. Next day the necessary documents were prepared, and the child was legally adopted by Monsieur and Madame Sabiere. The people were wealthy having accumulated a large fortune in the general clothing and outfiting business, which, by their joint efforts, they had built up to gigantic proportions Soon after taking Marie into charge they retired from business, and removed to Paris, where they purchased a handsome residence on the Rue De Villiers. and lived in good style. Marie won their affection, and was treated with the utmost tenderness. Attention was paid to her education, and she grew up lovely. amiable and intelligent. In 1869 Monsieur Sabiere died, and his widow died the following year. All the property sieur Sabiere died, and his widow died left by the couple went to their adopt ed child Marie,

A BRAVE ACT. In the meantime, Jacques De Mit had been transferred with other convicts to Cherbourg, to work upon the fortifications. In the same gang with Jacques was one Alexander Quecq. Between De Mit and Quecq there was so close a personal resemblance that they were usually styled "The Twins." This craated a bond of union between them, and warm friendship was the result. When it was found that Jacques had been bred to the sea, he was assigned to aid the riggers employed on the men-of-war fitting in the harbor. One day De Mit was at work on the topmast of a vessel, when a spar fell, and, striking one of the officers in command, knocked him overboard Jacques witnessed the accident, and saw the officer fall into the sea and disappear. Instantly he dived from his peril ous height, and, striking the water with the expertness of a practiced diver, soop re-appeared supporting the officer. Both were taken on board, and after a short time the officer was restored to concious ness. It was found that the falling span had stupped him, and that but for the timely aid of Jacques he must inevitably have perished. On the bravery and skill of Jacques being represented in the proper quarter a pardon was granted to him, and the officers and men of the fleet presented him with 3,000 francs, to which the government added 1,000 more. As Jacques' friend Quecq had still some months to serve, Jacques got permission to remain and work for wages, until his friend's term expired.

QUECQ'S BOLD SCHEME When this time came, they quitted Cherbourg together. Three weeks later they were in Dunkeque, where Jacques was taken ill. He communicated to Quecq his history and the facts respecting his sister, giving him the name of the gentleman who had adopted her and his address in Nantes, where he still supposed her to be. Jacques likewise committed over 4,000 francs to Quecq's care, directing him to find Marie and hand the money over to her as the dying gift of her brother. All this Quecq promised to fulfil faithfully. Jacques died and was buried under the name of Alexandre Quecq. Quecq. assuming the name of Jacques De Mit, went to Nantes and made himself known to persons there with whom he knew the real Jacques had been intimate. He learned that Monsieur and Madame Sabiere with their adopted daughter Marie had gone to reside in Paris, and thither he went. Quecq had for years been associ-ated with a gang of outlaws in Paris previous to his convicton, and was so desperate a thief and so heartless in his methods that he had acquired the name of "The Wolf." He took care on returning to Paris to keep aloof from his old haunts: He had allowed his beard to grow, and using the money entrusted to by Jacques, bought good clothes and took lodgings in a respectable neighborhood. He had settled in his mind a plan to enrich himself and he was resolved to run no chances of recognition. He was now Jacques De Mit, brother of a girl adopted by a wealthy old couple.

It was not long before he ascertained WALDRON Sells Good Fingering Yarn at 5c. per skein. the reisdence of Mons. Sabiere. Then he learned that the couple were dead and that Mile. Marie Sabiere, as she was called, was sole heiress to their fortune. Mlle. Blanc, who had been her governess since she was ten years old. lived with her and managed the small Queen found means to make the acquaintance of Mile. Blanc, and, being goodlooking and of plausible manners, soon won her confidence. A friendship was formed between them. Quecq represented himself as a government employe in the receipt of a good salary, band he seduced her. After he had thoroughly got her under his control and ultimately proposed marriage to the governess. She assented, and under promise of speedily becoming her hushe inquired respecting her mistress, and on being informed by her of the circumstances under which Marie had been adopted, expressed the utmost surprise, disclosed the fact that he was the young lady's brother. He made Mile. Blanc pledge berself to secrecy, and said not for the world would be have the fact revealed at present. By degrees he laid | Light or Heavy, before the woman the advantages that he would possess and she would share with him as his wife in case of the death of Mlle. Marie Sabiere.

"If she was aware of my existence," he said, "she might give her property away rather than that it should come into the hands of an ex-convict. If she were to die, this mansion, with all it contains and all the property she inherited from Mons. and Madame Sabiere would be mine, as the only heir."

Day after day this subject was renowed, and Quecq never failed to place be-fore Mile Blanc the life of pleasure and ease which they would pass together in case Mile. Sabiere should be removed

"Unless she dies soon, we may never profit by all this wealth," he said, "an who knows how soon she may marry, and then our chances are gone forever! Ultimately he ventured to suggest that Mile. Sabiere might be put out of the way. At first the woman shuddered at the thought, but as he constantly recurred to the subject, and finally reminded her that he must soon marry her in order to prevent disgrace, she began to dwell upon the idea. "It could easily be done," said Queco "Does she use poison for anything-belladonna for instance?"

"She sends to the druggist at times," was the answer, "for various medicines that she requires. She usually writes what she desires on a slip of paper, and I or the servant taxes it." ',Ah! She writes for things, does she?"
Quecq said. "Is her writing one easy to

"For me, yes" was the reply. "I taught her to write, and she writes so like me that if you put our writing tother," Miscellaneous Advertisements.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

ADVICE TO INVALIDS—If you wish to obtain quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, relief from pain and anguish to calm and assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous media, and regulate the circulating systems of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne (late Army Medical Staff) to which he gave the name of CHLORODYNE, and which is admitted by the profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHELORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Brouchitis and Asthma

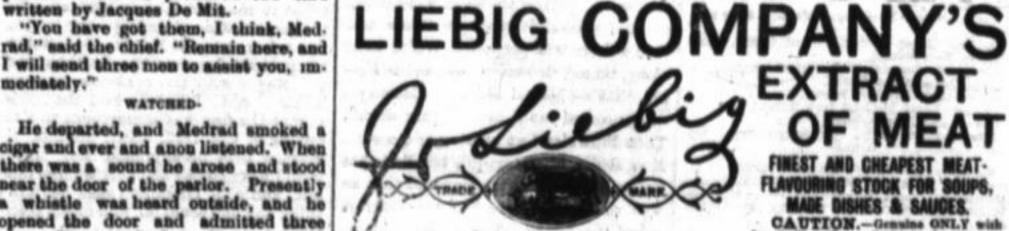

Dysentery. Choler THE ORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilopsy, Hysteria. Palpitation, and THE ORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout Cancer, Toothache

Collis Brow Ec's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself, not only in Hindostan, but all over the Rast. As a remedy of general utility we must question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Angle-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and inding from their sale, we fancy that their sejourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances and infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Uniorodyne in Diarrhosa, and Dysentery, Spasma, Crampa, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy and as a real sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In C. Diarrhosa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprise. Vecontrolling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne a firm conviction that is is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we see to the profession and the public, as we are of the opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne as a the public, as so are of the opinion that the substitution of any other than Collie Bruwie's is a ORLIBERATE BREACH OF FAITH ON THE PART OF THE CREMIST TO PRESCRIBER AND PATIENT ALFRE. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, Symes & Co. Members of the Pharmacy Society of Great Britain His
