A Husband Skips Out of the City Note for His Bride-His Other Love.

There is considerable excitement amongst those employed in the King ston Hosiery Mill on King Street East. The cause of the sensation is the deser tion of one who was a bride but a few months ago. This morning a representative of this paper drove to the mill and succeeded, though not without consid-rable trouble, in learning the chief having accepted a Lieutenancy, left features of the cass. He made some personal remarks and concluded with a cold "Good bye." He left his wife in Canada alone, unprotected and without friends, save these made Juring her eight weeks' stay in the city. While sitting in the office of the Hosiery Co. a vision of loveliness appeared at the door and Mrs. Thomson stood before us. She was demure and pretty. She has a neat figure and has a head of golden hair, drawn back, parted on one side and braided and tied. She has large liquid eyes, and very pleasant features. Any one at a look would have said that the husband was a tool to desert her. DENIED ANY FORMER MARRIAGE. The young woman was not desirous of answering any questions. She said she intended to write home and learn all about her husband. She denied that he had been previously married, and her statement is probably correct, as she had lived in the same place with him for many years. The reporter was requested to interview another gentleman for the facts he desired. The bride was distressed and her brain, owing to recent events, was in a whirl. Then again she did not care for much publicity. The gentleman whom we were advised to see declared that he was non-communicative, but by a little manovreing we drew from him all the inthe street. He can play almost any instrument, but excels upon the piano, clarionet and picolo. The only duet was that of Messre. Hatch and McCutcheon, cornet and picolo. It was popularly received. There were two recitations by Mr. F. Simmonds, one descriptive of police life in London. They were listened to attentively and followed by evidences of gratification. There were readings by Dr. McCammon, Mr. Bawden and Pedestrian Perry, the latter a substitute for Sergt. Moore. All the subjects proved interesting. The choruses were among the most delightful features of the occasion. "Sowing the Seed," the opening item, was very feelingly given "Traveller, Whither Art thou Going !" and Love one Another," won a great deal of admiration, especially the solo of the latter. The talent of the noncommissioned officers was fully exhibit ed. "Wait till the Clouds Roll By," a new and pretty thing, published in the it ar Cry, was sung by Sergt. F. Taylor, a very good tener; he and W. Stacey sang, "Shall we Gather at the River?" a pathetic composition; and W. and J. CAPT. ARRIE'S RETURN.

Yesterday morning Capt. Abbie returned from her trip upon the lake and visit to Rochester. She has been very ill. For the first three days after her leaving the city she was particularly low, and though not near death's door she felt peace in her soul and had no fear of death. Had she fallen or beer pitched overboard she would have got a "welcome home." She thinks Rochester a dreadful wicked city, and her opinion a head of it were made more unfavorable by culation by them of blasphemy, of vile into Mr. A.
