> Rev. John Gallagher delivered an appropriate sermon, which he based upon Ephesians ii, 19 to ead. In opening referred to the ignorance and infidelit of the age, to the assumptions of who claimed that they belonged to the one true church, to the dictation in mat tern spiritual. The great question, his saind was, What say the Scriptores! What do they teach of the Churches That the true Church is that in which dwells the Spirit of the Lord. He did not purpose a defence of the Presbytermembers of it strove for an intelligent stronger became their sympathy for lovers of the Lord Jesus Christ. one hated bigotry more than he did, but an intelligent attachment to scriptural avatem and a similast royalty to conviction were not bigotry. These were not the ill-favored offspring of prejudice and intolerance. He proceeded to argue that Presbyterians were not narrow and bigoted, but broad, extensive and charitable, world-wide in their sympathies and aims. He did not encourage a controversial spirit, and yet he said it was the duty of all attached to the principles preserved to them by their fathers to assert that the doctrines and government of their Church are founded upon the Bible, but that it is the most progressive Protestant Church in Christendom. He repudiated the idea that Presbyterians were selfish and exclusive. They did not refuse to recognize Christ; he said they held out the hand of fellowship to all who loved the Lord in sincerity and truth; but they were attached to the Prosbyterian Church because they believed it to be founded as well as the most ancient and apostolic of all systems. Passing by the denominational aspect of the question he proceeded to discuss-(1) (iod's view of the elaboration of these, points was both | the way for a fuller masterly and interesting.
