THE MAYOR NEWS.

Last Night's and Tuesday's Reports Continued Down For Busy Readers.

There is a marked improvement in Gen. Grant's condition.

The Murchisons of Lansdowne does not approve of tobogganing.

The Loyal Orange Brotherhood, a non-political Orange Association, is spreading.

James McCann, junkman, and his mistress were frozen to death at Jersey City yesterday.

Lord and Lady Lansdowne, accompanied by Lord and Lady Melgund, will arrive in Toronto on Monday evening, Jan. 7.

Arrangements have been made for special railway trains to convey 20,000 Orangemen to oppose the Nationalist meeting at Dromore, County Down.

Since the New York Herald's reduction to two cents its circulation has largely decreased. Its news stand proprietors have virtually collapsed.

The Queen and Princess Beatrice, who are now in Cowes, are to remain in the isle of Wight till the middle of February, when they will return to Windsor Castle.

In Montreal bill posters and managers are obliged to submit all bills, posters and placards for the Chief of Police's approval before they are posted or circulated.

Placards, signed by Lord Rossmore, have been posted throughout County Monaghan, summoning Orangemen to oppose the proposed Nationalist meeting at Clodahill.

Dr. Hamilton Griffin, the step-father of Mary Anderson, recently sent an order to a Louisville, Ky., whiskey dealer for two gallons of the "best, choicest hand-made sour-mash whiskey for preservation to the Prince of Wales."

BOOTS HERRING A TALE.

Chief McKinnon, of Belleville, Tracing a Man Charged with Murder by his Boots.

Picton, Dec. 29.—The investigation of the murder case was continued until 2 o'clock to-day, when an adjournment was made until next Thursday. The evidence pointed strongly to the guilt of the parties. The Chief of the Belleville Police here testified to the finding of tracks in the snow that fitted Thompson's shoes. "I made," said he, "impressions with the shoe alongside the track, and the size and shape compared exactly. I fitted both the right and left shoe in the prints and they corresponded exactly; the prints in the snow I considered had been made by Thompson's shoes, which had the appearance of being used recently in check.

"I swear that these tracks were made by the long boots," and placing his hands on the boots, he said, while the crowd almost stood breathless, "these are the boots that made the tracks." The boots fit the prints as to the right and the left. The test was a thorough one. There is a peculiarity about the boots in the length of the shank from the heel to the ball sole. There is a difference of nearly a quarter of an inch in both boots, which was distinctly shown in the foot prints in the snow and ice. The prints were a perfect duplicate of the boots, as if made by a plaster Paris mould. The shoes fitted the tracks that led to Thompson's house, and I swear most positively that there is not another pair of shoes that would fit these prints as Thompson's did. The outside of each upper extended over the sole—the right more than the left—which was clearly seen also in the snow. These shoes came from Thompson's feet, and from the point of separation in the track spoken of above they led to Thompson's house. At this point of separation in the track the long boots led to Lucker's house.

RYAN BACKS OUT?

The Premium Fobby Comes to the Front With a Challenge.

Chicago, Dec 31.—In response to repeated requests from sporting men here that he fulfil his engagement with Sullivan in San Francisco next month, Feb. 29, Ryan telegraphs from Toledo: "I will return when my mother's health will permit, and no sooner." This is an intimation that Ryan has finally backed out of the engagement. Last night Charles G. alias "Pierce," Davies stated that he was authorized by Wm. Sherriff, alias "The Prussian," to announce his willingness to meet Sullivan in Ryan's place subject to the same agreements, except that the whole purse is shall go to the winner.

Sweet this night.

A druggist in Paris having been convicted of adulterating sulphate of quinine, has been sentenced to a years imprisonment at hard labor, to pay a fine of a thousand francs, the costs, and orders to be published in twelve political and twelve professional papers and their decision to be affixed to signs—"Sentenced for adulterating sulphate of quinine." This is severe punishment for the crime was an infringement on the rights of trade from the sick rather than any degree of intensity.

Mr's. Jones threw a cucumber, Jones struck with every venom death only conceived and her husband happened to enter the room. Then to restore belief and their clothing to its original beauty, the work was completed and with three cents worth of gold results as the best practical specimen of cents at all druggists.

A ROMANCE INDEED.

A Pretty Girl Steals a Horse in Order to be Sent to Gaol with Her Lover.

The people of Napanville, Hamilton county, are very much excited over the romantic marriage of the pretty daughter of the village apothecary with the son of an old Indian Lake guide, Peel Roderick. The young man is a manly looking fellow, about 26 years of age, and is confined in gaol at Napanville, charged with stealing a pair of horses from a neighboring farmer. The young lady was a member of the Methodist Church in the village, and together with a number of the congregation had been in the centre of holding meetings in the gaol. She became very much interested in the prisoner, and he in turn professed a change of life under her ministrations. Suspicion, generally so quick to be excited in certain hearts, seemed to lie dormant until the professed conversion of Roderick when tongues began to wag and much whispered talk began to be connected with Miss Amelia's name. After fathom hearing of the state of affairs, Amelia bore the ridicule, of which it made her victim, and after a visit to the Sheriff succeeded in slipping them. But love laughs at locksmiths, and the father's wishes and the Sheriff's commands were not sufficient to separate the loving hearts.

THE LOVERS FLED.

About three weeks ago Miss Amelia was discovered missing, and for over a week her whereabouts were unknown. At that time a constable came into Napanville having the maiden in custody, charged with stealing one of the milk cans from her lover had stolen, and which she had taken in broad daylight. After making a shallow attempt to escape, she was captured, her bail fixed at $600, which she refused to accept, and she was locked up in the same gaol with her lover, Roderick. The original scheme was that she should go to the old guide's camp and there await the arrival of young Roderick, who intended to make his escape at the earliest opportunity. She did so, but after a week's waiting, becoming desperate, availed herself of the first opportunity to commit a crime which would at least place her behind the bars with the man for whom she was willing to make such a sacrifice. The attempt, as will be seen, was successful, although, as she states, the taking of the same animal that her lover stole was a simple and unintentional accident.

THE HORSE OWNED.

After her incarceration, both herself and Roderick expressed to the Sheriff a wish to be married, which request that official deemed it his duty to comply with, as both the parties were of age and had a right to enter into such a contract. Magistrate Jarvis was summoned, and with two deputies as witnesses the ceremony was performed in the jail corridor. The ladies of the romantic bride is of course very much angered at the action of the Sheriff, and threatens all connected with the affair with unpleasant results. It is said that a jury who will agree on conviction cannot be obtained in the county, so high does this feeling of sympathy run. The District Attorney states that he will prosecute both the bride and groom, promising, however, to try and bring both cases before the court in the same instalment.

THE CRIME OF THE LOVERS.

Napanville, the scene of this romance in love's young dream, is a little village in the heart of the Adirondack mountains, lying 70 miles from Watertown, in the dense wilderness, on the banks of Lake Pleasant, where Edward Budd, the mysterious murderer, was executed a few years ago. It is an admirable place for romance—Budd saying that his only regret on dying was that he would then lose sight of the beauties of the grand old forest in which he had spent many years, and never long any more the prattle of the innocent little children in the police family—the only thing that had made any impression upon him during his imprisonment. There are but few people in that wild region, and it is not strange that the love of a lasting young woman should be bestowed upon a manly looking fellow—despite that that he was charged with a felony.

Religious Bulletin.

The Bishop of Rochester, England, has taken occasion to commend publicly the work now being carried on in that country by Messrs. Moody and Sankey, and has thereby drawn upon himself the denunciations of the Rev. J. C. Gill, a clergyman of that diocese, who declares that the tendency of the evangelical teaching is to make men believe that they may safely sin rather than that they may be saved from sin.

Repeating Watches.

"What are you crying about," asked a kind hearted stranger of a lad who was standing in front of a newspaper office weeping as if his heart would break.

"Oh, dad's gone up-stairs to lick the editor."

"Well, has he come down yet?" pursued the gentle humanitarian.

"Yessir, of his own accord, explained the boy, indulging in a fresh outburst of tears, "and I'm repeating the text every minute."

Mrs. Mary Thompson, of Toronto, probably the oldest lady in the province, is the mother of eight boys, all living, and the youngest is of the Lord's Pleasant Years. The mistake is probably that of Mother Nature that a child sometimes arrives.

Peacock, of the New York Clothing House, is having a great clearing sale of ready-made clothing, consisting of suits and heavy overcoats. Each buyer will do well by calling on him. He will also give a grand exhibition on climbing trees to order. Remember the quotations, 4 Rank Place.

Do Not Be Deceived.

A recently discovered and highly prized remedy for headache has lately been exposed to be a worthless fraud. But as with Burdock's Blood Bitters that stands at the head, John Carter, of Milbridge, Me., says that it saved his life.

ORANGE RIOTS.

Additional Details of the Outbreak at Harbour Grace—Some Sixteen Arrests Made.

St. John's, Dec. 28.—Twelve in all have been arrested. Hearn, Winter and McNally, Orange chiefs from St. John, have been most successful in their mission of peace among the Orangemen, although a good deal of excitement prevails. At 2 p.m. a despatch said thirteen persons had been arrested, and a 4 p.m. despatch says Gilchrist's funeral was escorted by a large police force, all the local magistrates accompanying it.

A later despatch says the funeral of French passed through Harbour Grace from George's Beach, and escorted by 400 Orangemen from Harbour Grace. The mail steamer Lady Glover was prevented from landing her mails and passengers at Carbonear, as the Orangemen had determined that no business should be done nor any arrivals of strangers be permitted till after Jones' funeral. A still later despatch says that 1,200 Orangemen with flags and banners, and in full regalia, attended Jones' funeral at Carbonear.

St. John's, Dec. 31.—A private letter gives the following as the true story of the whole affair: The Orangemen walked out on the morning of St. Stephen's Day and got as far as Paddy McCarthy's landing from Harvey street in Water street. They had just arrived at the bridge and were playing the "Boyne Water" when they were met by the mob and told to go no further, but to go back. The Roman Catholics were ranged along with pickets in their hands to the front, and had determined to use no other weapons unless in self defence.

They fought with these till head constable Doyle shot down like a dog Pat Callahan from the south side of Harbour Grace. Then went up the cry "all hands look out" and in the instant of want a rattling volley from several sealing guns. Four were left killed and 11 were badly wounded, the rest of the Orangemen flying like sheep, tearing off their scarfs and leaving their flags and banners behind them.

Young Pat Donnelly tore their flags into strips and planted the green flag in their place. He was first set by an Orangeman, who was running away, and wounded.

When the flying Orangemen got down into the city in safe quarters the began breaking the windows of the Roman Catholic houses and tearing down the shutters of those whose houses were closed. They broke through the shop windows of John Hennessy and attacked William Hennessy on the street. They stop, "we honours, ... Bellevue hill, the Rt. ... Catholic Bishop, later in the day, w ... he was on a visit to the wounded men at Bear's Cove.

They then attempted to throw him over a precipitous cliff near George's Bay but were prevented by Father Rice, a big herculean Irish priest who inflicted a severe blow on the head of one of the assailants with the leather handle whip and dispersed the mob. Father Rice had to be escorted the remainder of the journey by the Montreal Police. Old Johnny Schully got a severe beating from the Orangemen. Bill Thomas, a notorious character, leaps singing out from his house, "Have blood for blood."
