(Correspondence to the Whig.) The born Canadian, travelling Scotland, observes a pleasant strange ness in everything that surrounds him. Even the production of nature, as well as the handiworks of ingenious men, a vary from what he has experienced in his continental home in glorious Canada. So is it with the dress, manners and habits of the people. As there is widespread interest on "Ould Ireland at present, it may interest and profit the Whio readers to get a rough and ready sketch of rural affairs and countr life in the Sister Isle, fair Scotland. Farm servants from very early times have been hired of engaged for periods not less than six months, the summer term beginning on the 26th May and the winter one on the 22nd of November. By law, I believe, but by nuiversal practice, at least, each servant can claim one day in each six months to attend the semi-annual feeing fair, to sell his or her labor to the highest bidder for the ensuing six months. | gae ye w dance an' tak' ye hame, an' These gatherings are held at certain borough towns, and never change their | gae ye a nicht's neck ing that yo'll nac locations from year to year, as some Prices exhibitions in Canada.
