The proclamation is variously regarded, by some with favour, by others | To the Editor of the British Whig. with dissatisfaction, by others with appre a public decree by a Prince as distinguished from the simple rescript, which was a declaration of law in answer to a question propounded by an individual, The name is given to several important treaties, of which the principal are:

1. An ordinance of Charles VII. France, in which the rights of the Gallican Church were asserted in opposition to the usurpation of the Pope in the appeintment of Bishops. Thirty years later Louis XI., in order to please Pope Pius II., was induced to give up this P.S., but at a subsequent date, a quarrel having arisen between Louis and the Pope, the P.S. was re-enacted.

2. The instrument which settled the Empire of Germany in the House of Austria (1489.)

8. The decree by which Charles VI. issue, settled his dominions on his daugh. ter, the Archduchess Maria Theresa, Empire and guaranteed by Great Bri tain, France, the States general, and most of the European powers.

4. The settlement of the succession the Kingdom of Naples, which was ceded by Charles II., of Spain, in 1759, to his third son and descendants.

By some the rescript is regarded as an attempt to give prominence to Imperialism, and have have it rule rather than a Government acting constutional Emperor insists upon his royal and individual right to control the Govern ment, which accounts to some extent for the noisy scenes that have occurred in the recent sittings of the Reichstag.

Control of the Contro A LOCAL SCHEME.

Between 197 and 1880 the census of Frontenac shower a decrease of popula. tion to the extent of 2,000 souls. During a part of this time farm wages were living. Labour is not more wise in its movements than in its strikes. It cannot be denied, however, that no special effort has been made to induce labour ers to settle in this district, and local enterprises and agriculture suffer in consequence. Perhaps the total emigration from the district might have been checked had there been any immigration of farmers to it. The exodus is as much a matter of manufactured opinion as any popular movement. If the broad facts be realized that farmers in this section of the Province have nothing to complain of, and that industry if it does not draw the prizes certainly gets few the blanks incidental to the shifting of settlement from an old to a new coun try, there has been nothing to warrant emigration from this or the adjoining likely find the work arduous but pleacounties within the past ten years.
