They come in the happy hours Ot childhood's guileless morn n the time of fruit and flowers, Of April and sunny showers -The heart's first tears are born.

They carry no lasting pains, And they leave no bitter stains, No grief trace, as they run. They drop on our moouday path, Forced from the bruised heart

As the wine press in its wrath, With the giant power it hath, Bids the red flool outstart. But ah! they hurry no more

When the warm sunappears; For the eyes that weep are sore. The heart is sad at the core, Ere manhood sheds its tears. Yet, thank God for their flow.

Since hearts would snap in twain, With all they love laid low, Crushed down with speechless woe, But for that dear heart-rain. -WILLIAM LYLE. Rochaster Express.
