Him is to trust Him. He warned them NOT TO DELUDE THEMSELVES with the idea that they were in the condition described as passing from one side to another. There was no such moral condition in religious life. One must take a position either for God or against Him, among the saved or unsaved. What should it be? The text was the best possible definition of prayer, which was shewn to be a waiting upon God for a definite purpose and expecting to get it. Not one-twentieth of what was called prayer was really such. Prayer will be answered, that is the prayer of the children of God, for has not God covenanted to answer it He that seeks shall find; he that knocks shall have opened unto him. He closed with a word to unbelievers. "Would you not like," said he, "to be where we are?
