wished to have the streets watered at their expense. (Laughter.) Ald. Smythe said the resolution was illegal. He read the law, and the opinion of a learned Commentator, (late Chief Justice Harrison) that it was in the discretion of the Council to charge the cost to the corporate funds or have it borne by the freeholders and householders fronting upon the affected streets. The latter course could only be adopted after the presentation of a petition from the locality requesting the water.
