As he made a sweep at the burdock's head; But then, he thought it was best, no doubt, To come some day and root it out. So he lowered his soythe, and went his way Te see his corn, to gather his hay ; And the weed grew safe and strong and tall. Close by the side of the garden wall.

As he hopped up out of the dusty road. He had just been having a dreadful fright The boy who gave it was yet in sight. Here it was cool and dark and green, The safest kind of a leafy screen, The toad was happy; "For," said he, "The burdock was plainly meant for me.

"Good for a prop," the spider thought, And to and fro with pare he wrought, Till he fastened it well to an evergreen, And spun his cables fine between.

"Good for play," said a child, perplext To know what frolic was coming next. So she gathered the burrs that ail despised. And her city playmate was quite surprised To see what a beautiful basket or chair Could be made, with a little time and care. They ranged their treasures about with pride, And played all day by the burdock's side.

Nothing is lost in this world of ours Honey comes from the idle flowers; The weed which we pass in utter scorn. May save a life by another morn. Wonders await us at every turn. We must be silent, and gladly learn Since even a burdock has its use. -St. Nicholas
