At least it would appear so when the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company expends thousands of dollars upon a work which compares most . vorably with any ever offered for a price by the most noted publishers of the country. It is one hundred and fifty two pages in extent, and upon them is displayed a series of engravings which no numbers of Harper's or Scribner's ever surpassed. The fact that Thomas Moran, to-day the foremost artist on mountain scenery in the world, made more than seventy drawings expressly for this one work establishes its exalted character. When are added the productions of W.
