The second division of the First Class was under review, and the boys acquitthemselves creditably and gave satisfying proof of the excellent train, ing they had received from the Brothers of the Christian fraternity. The laadfeature of the days' programme was the exhibition made by the lads in the matter of original compositions. Willie | costs Sullivan wrote about Manitoba, its life, growth, and the nature of its business; Keating read a "letter to his mother;" P. Milne took the Kingston Locomotive Works, describing its operations, its manufactures, the number of men it employed, and the benefit it was to the city and the workingmen; A. Milne, cousin of the preceding, gave a synon sis of the manner in which the Queen's Birthday was usually celebrated, the fun by land and water, and the enthusiasm and inbilation of the people on such occasions; J. A. McDonald expressed his views on the subject of "Going to School;" P. Power discussed "The Market;" J. Weber had some pathetic observations to make about "Bird's Nests;" M. Quinlivan told of the expressed his detestation of "Idleness; 'The Miser," had a severe critic in E O'Brien, and "The Soldier's Life," was admirably treated by H. Clayton. P. Feddis gave a boy's conception of newsspirit was imparted to the newsboys, their superiors. In all these efforts the boys shewed that they had made efforts to be as original and neat in their manner of writing. The examination, however, went further and included Christian Doctrine, Reading, Spelling, Analysis, Parsing, Arithmetic, History and Geography, the questions being asked by his Lordship and the Brothers.
