DEVELOPING A BOOM

The Mail is now devoting its attention to the piano boom. It has quoted from this paper a notice of the new addition to one of the lecal factories, and expres. Sir John didn't do that. He raced up sed its amazement that we should day and down the Province, and prior to and after day print articles declaring that snare. It says we could not speak of an enlargement of these industries had there not been a protective tariff. We can add that both piano factories in this city have been for some years in existence, that both were established prior to the invention of the national policy.

We have mever stated that factories of all kinds were not increasing and improving, because increase is most natural in tended and still centend is that the national policy has had mighty little to do that which baffled Mr. Mackenzie's in with much of the enterprise of the present day, and that it has little to do with failed to furnish amployment to the skill the piano boom-unless it affects the | ed labourers of the Capital, and rememoutput of the United States as well as of | bering the fine promises made to them Canada. As many pianos as ever, perhaps, come to Canada, but they are of the cheap kind and it takes many of them to make the exhibit of a few of the superior sort.

We print all the evidences we see of industrial growth and activity, but we are not so idiotic as to believe, as all good Conservatives are supposed to do that there would be an almost entire absence of these but for the Government's trade policy. A second election with it for the battle cry would result unto provide a greater swindle, the Redistribution Bill, through the instrumen tality of which Sir John and his supporters hope to again scramble into office.
