Strange to say the man did not seem t realize the seriousness of the affair or the cruel nature of the practical joke. The detective then drove off to Mr. Smith's house, and as gently as possible told the parents that the report was also and without foundation. Detective Arcand remained in the house for some time conversing about the case. Just as Le was about to take his leave a ring was heard at the door bell. The housemaid answered the bell and admitted Mr. Alex. Shaw, who congratulated Mr.

A few minutes after nine clock his door bell was was rung, and a lady going to the door immediately disovered a little boy standing alone or the doorstep. Beside him was a small package. The child was taken into the house at once, when, from the published likeness, it was concluded that he was the missing Arthur Smith. All doubt discovery of a portion of a postal card tied round the child's wrist which bore suffering humanity.
