COLOSSAL CANFONS.

Bout of English Mochanical Skills-Mas tacture of Great Cannen-Later coting Opinion.

The manufacture of the great gun for naval warfare forms the really im feature of Woolwich ersens her armament. How to make guns which nations, how to make fron walls whi forate, is the two fold problems which constantly spurs her forward a Asingle inside the Woolwich arsens guns in line side by side, made nelew years ago, which have never been fred since they were tested, and are as new and fresh as when first turned out from the factory. Yet all these guns are to be broken up and recast into improved ordinance. Within a few years, they have become obsolete, and all the vast labour and expense they represent go for nothing save the experience gound. To the cost as well as the progress o wars these long lines of cannen con demned without trial, bear mute but mapressive testimony.

Two thirds of all the structures of THE WOOLWICH ARBENAL appear to be given up to the manufacture of these colossal cannons. At the first stage of their construction there is made a long core of cast steel. strips of wrought steel as long and large as the beams of a house are wrapped around the breech end. The strips are laid on hot, one after another moceoils. and contracting as they cook form breech of prodigious strength. Next the gun is placed on a lathe, turned smooth the centre bored out, and the inside polished until one can see the huer reflected from its curves. The rifling is an must the steel core of the gun. With an efficient range of several miles, it carries a conical shot, twenty inches through, weighing almost a tone and needing several handred pounds of powder to project it. A shot of this size now ponetrates the thickest naval armor plating, and cuts through twenty inches of solid iron backed with tak as General Agent Eastern Ontario, Peterboro. cleanly as a bullet through cheese. It has, after much experiment, been found that the most effective rifling for these cannons is a groove starting as a straigh. line at the breech. Half way to the muzzle the groove begins to turn, and
